

My opinion on every Polcombball Ideology

A bizarre political slideshow

Before we begin, i'm using this list of ideologies.

Okay let's go

Abolitionism Part 1

Like most people, i believe that slavery is bad. No one should be exploited for their labour against their will or without compensation.

Abolitionism does get controversial when defining what counts as 'slavery'. Most people consider slavery in the western world as extinct, while some on the left consider being made to work a job you don't want to in order to make enough money to live as a type of 'soft slavery'.

Personally, my definition of slavery falls somewhere in the middle, things like debt slavery are still occasionally exposed in the western world, meaning that the west isn't fully free of slavery.

Although, comparing simply working a dead-end job to make ends meet to being forced to perform back breaking labour against your will just to sleep in barely livable conditions does undermine the suffering that slaves went and go through.

Obviously, working a job you do not want to isn't a great situation but in that scenario you still have the possibility of finding another job that you actually enjoy, unlike slavery, which is a lifelong forced contract.

"Am I not a man and brother?"

Abolitionism or Anti-Slavery is an ideology that is against slavery. It believes that all people, regardless of their ethnic origin, are free and should not be at the mercy of other people.

Abolitionism Part 2

Meanwhile in Africa and certain parts of Asia, slavery is clearly still present. From children mining cobalt to sweatshop workers being paid almost nothing for their labour, which is obviously something that should be addressed.

A big driving force of third-world modern slavery is the demands of service economies in the western world which has recently been highlighted by services such as Temu and Shein managing to price their items so cheap by using sweatshops based in third world countries, along with cutting down on production quality, even to dangerous levels in some cases.

Third world slavery, (in my view) is simply another symptom of the need for infinite exponential growth in a capitalist economy. Once domestic factories couldn't meet demand for goods, we turned to overseas producers that were more than happy to sell for much cheaper than the factories that could be investigated for slavery by the country that was buying it.

They factory's own country is unlikely to stop them either. Whether it be from a lack of governmental authority, politicians getting bribed to turn a blind eye or even the sad fact that some sweatshops still pay tax and contribute to the economy, making shutting them down a risky move both politically and economically.

TLDR: I heavily support Abolitionism in all cases where it is applied.

"Am I not a man and brother?"

Abolitionism or Anti-Slavery is an ideology that is against slavery. It believes that all people, regardless of their ethnic origin, are free and should not be at the mercy of other people.

Absolute Monarchism

No single person should have total power over a nation, including those granted a 'divine right to rule'. A system like this always results feuds between different claimants to the throne, oppression of citizens and often reactionary backwards policies due to the 'divine right to rule' being born out of extremely traditional religious dogma.

Thankfully, Absolute Monarchism is on the way out in the world, with only 4 nations practicing Absolute Monarchism today.

The Medieval age of knights and castles was cool, but good riddance to Absolute Monarchs.

Vive La République

"L'état, c'est moi."

(The state, it is I.)

Absolute Monarchism is an authoritarian ideology which advocates for a single monarch with absolute rule over the state who is not bound by any formal rules, often being seen as owning the countries they reside over.

Accelerationism

So, this ideology is kind of insane and I hope i don't have to explain why this is a terrible idea.

Technological change is good, but obviously accelerating it to an extreme degree is way too much.

Ideally capitalistic growth should be regulated and slowly brought to a halt to prevent seeking exponential growth.

And finally, infrastructure sabotage is basically terrorism, like i'm partial to blowing up an oil pipeline or two, but come on... this ain't the way to do it.

"NYOOOOOOM"

Accelerationism is a range of ideas in both left and right-wing circles that call for the drastic intensification of capitalist growth, technological change, infrastructure sabotage or other processes of social change to destabilize existing systems and create radical social transformations,

Acid Communism

I hope this along with the last ideology sets the fact that a lot of these ideas are gonna be a bit insane.

The description of this is kinda vague, so i'm gonna assume this mean essentially communist hippies.

Communism is a deeply flawed ideology and you aren't gonna sway me with the promise of free weed.

Drugs are bad, my body is a temple of soda and stress.

"Capital is an abstract parasite, an insatiable vampire and zombie maker; but the living flesh it converts into dead labor is ours, and the zombies it makes are us."

Acid Communism is an economically far-left ideology proposed by Mark Fisher. It believes that leftists should take inspiration from and use elements of the 1960's counterculture and psychedelic movements to imagine future political possibilities.

African Socialism

This is gonna spoil my opinion of socialism for later, but i think Socialism is a system that only ever works in a truly democratic framework since unelected leaders are almost always dictators in practice.

Colonialism was a terrible system which resulted in the ethnic and cultural erasure of hundreds of native cultures around the world, same with imperialism, so i'm on common ground there.

As for the opposition to capitalism, i'm kinda half and half, Capitalism is a deeply flawed system that results in widespread inequality, poverty and worker mistreatment if left unregulated.

On the other hand, Capitalism can work. For example, Denmark has the world's smallest income gap and is #10 for best quality of life while still being capitalist.

Basically, Socialism is much too extreme of a solution for capitalism, no matter it's regional variant.

"Workers of Africa, Unite!"

African Socialism is a pan-Africanist and socialist ideology that believes in sharing economic resources based on traditional African methods of doing so. There are differing variants coming from many different theorists, leaders and revolutionaries. Although no matter the variant, It heavily opposes capitalism, colonialism and imperialism*

Agorism

I feel weird even just writing about this one...

Mainly because depending of your definition of violent “Red Markets”, Agorism advocates for a “Cheese Pizza” market.

But let's be hopeful and assume it doesn't want that, it hardly makes anything better.

Advocating for the sale of “Non-violent” yet illegal items can include the sale of drugs, chemicals which may be harmless alone but can be combined for harmful effects, guides to doing harmful stuff (technically the guide itself doesn't hurt anyone) and depending on how much you stretch to meaning, which criminal dealers love to do, could even include firearms without any ammo (you can buy ammo at the stall down the road but it's fine since it's a different store that sells only ammo)

Obviously that's assuming the definition is followed, since criminal dealers don't exactly care for ideology they would be happy to run a ‘grey store’ while also selling ‘red items’ via a secret passphrase.

Anyway, Agorism sucks, regulate nukes please.

"Hello customer! Would you like to buy a McNuke?"

Agorism promotes Grey and Black markets, while advocating against Red markets. Grey markets are those which are legal but outside the framework of the state, Black markets are those which are illegal but not violent, and Red markets are those which are violent. The focus of Agorism is on counter-economics, which are defined as the sum of all non-aggressive Human Action which is forbidden by the State.

Agrarian Anarchism

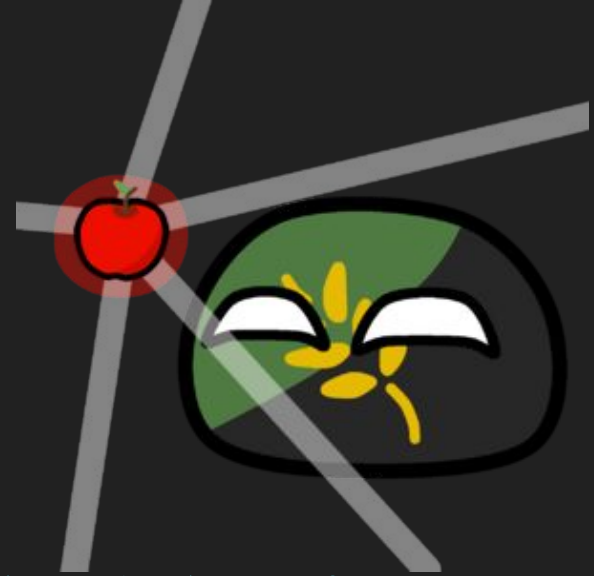

This isn't a terrible anarchist ideology like the last one, but it is still Anarchism, which i'm not a big fan of.

While authoritarianism is too extreme in the other direction, a stable nation requires organized police, fire fighting and ambulances at the very least.

While theoretical Anarchist communes are at least somewhat organized, there is no hierarchy of who makes decisions.

This can lead to constant disagreements and squabbling at best and conflict at worst.

As for the Agrarian part of this, I'm not against people living farming and rural lifestyles, do what you want since it doesn't hurt anyone.

"Nothing like sharing fresh produce outside of the state regulated farmer's market."

Agrarian Anarchism is an ideology which believes in the preservation of the environment and of more traditional agricultural practices to ensure food security. It also posits that the state is a threat to not just the way food is produced, but to the human way of life in general. It raises heritage breeds of animals and grows heirloom plants. It isn't entirely opposed to genetic modification but is wary of GMOs produced by corporations, especially terminator crops.

Agrarian Capitalism

I've already gone on an essay about capitalism recently, so to summarize...

Capitalism is a very flawed ideology that can result in the exploitation of workers and reckless environmental practices in regard to industry. That being said, alternatives such as communism and most forms of socialism are too far in the other direction.

Although in regards to food, i don't exactly think food should be publicly owned but there should be regulations to prevent companies from just pumping up the price of food under the guise of "Inflation"

An ideal system would be a capitalist Agrarian system with heavy health and price regulations along with a limit to a company's market share so they cannot monopolise the food market. cough Nestle cough

"A kilo of hay costs $50, 3 kilos of beans is $25..."

Agrarian Capitalism is an ideology that is a mix of an agriculture-based society with Capitalism. It is one of the oldest ideologies, it probably emerged in antiquity and in the early years of the first empires, but it only de facto originated in the "Crisis of the Late Middle Ages". Currently, it is present in emerging countries or in the agrarian sector of rich capitalist countries.

Agrarian Socialism

Okay, this is the 'too much' i was talking about in the last slide...

While equally distributing land among villagers may sound good, it would likely reduce food production since most villagers either Doesn't want to, doesn't know how or physically can't perform farming labour.

Another problem is scale, one single large corporate farm can be managed efficiently by a handful of managers while the same space containing 50 or so individual small farms have to have their own individual inventories, market stall, etc

I know some may suggest collectivization in response to these arguments but i think that would kinda undermine the whole equally give land to each villager thing.

"Land to the Tillers!"

Agrarian Socialism is an ideology that combines an Agrarian lifestyle with a Socialist economic system. Agrarian socialism promotes social ownership of agrarian and agricultural production as opposed to private ownership. Agrarian socialism involves equally distributing agricultural land among collectivized peasant villages. Unlike most other forms of Socialism, it believes that the peasant class should form the basis of Socialist society instead of the workers. As such, while not explicitly opposing technological progress, it prefers a simpler agriculture-based society over the industrial one.

Agrarianism

Like i said before, i have nothing against having a farming lifestyle, someone has to grow the food, so go wild.

As for the farming-based society bit, i'm against that since farming is generally one of the more primitive sections of a developed economy, so basing a society around that would only delay development of the economy.

"It ain't much, but it's honest work."

Agrarianism is a political ideology distinguished by a support of a farming-based society. Most agrarians favor subsidization and land rights, culturally agrarianism is also ambiguous but tends to be right-wing as a rural lifestyle is more dependent on inheritance as compared to an urban one. Agrarians tend to oppose centralization.

Alt-Lite

Although not as bad as their extreme counterpart, Alt-Lite still pushes ignorant and occasionally dangerous views on LGBT rights, gender politics, racism, etc.

A prominent Alt-Lite figure is Matt Walsh, a man who claimed during a podcast that women were 'most fertile' during the ages of 15 to 16 years old, which isn't just wrong, it's really creepy. (This is the same crowd that is trying to 'protect kids from the gay groomers' by the way)

I'm not trying to accuse the entire Alt-Lite of being creeps, that would be extreme overgeneralization.

There's also Tucker Carlson who had a very one-sided 'interview' with Vladimir Putin, where he allowed the Russian President to spout his propaganda about Ukraine and NATO. Tucker Carlson is also a prominent denier of the 2020 US election results.

It even got to the point that Tucker Carlson's former employer, Fox News was sued by a voting machine company when Carlson claimed the machines were rigged.

Overall, the Alt-Lite is a bit of a mess, but nowhere near as bad as it's even more bigoted counterpart.

"Fucking leftoids, ain't I right?"

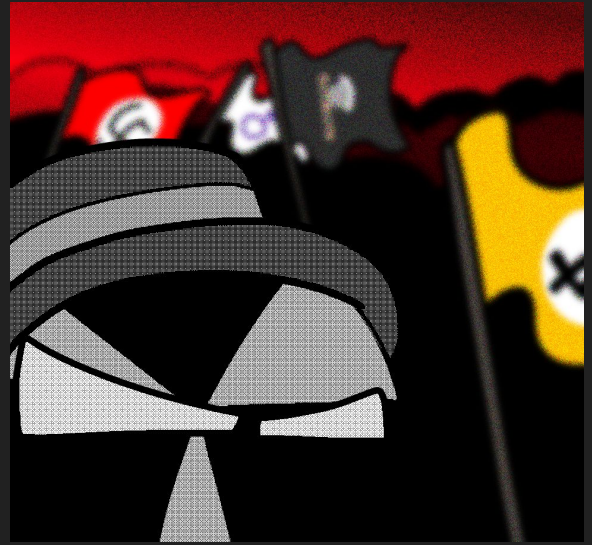

Alt-Lite is a broad ideological label describing a set of movements which portray relatively moderate views while still maintaining a right-wing opposition to mainstream politics. Alt-Lites are generally distinguished by having a much lower interest in the issues of race as compared to Alt-Rights, usually favoring some form of Civic Nationalism or Cultural Nationalism. Instead, Alt-Lite is usually much more concerned with over the issues of culture, economics and what is being pushed by the state.

Alt-Right

Embarrassing confession, i used to be somewhat like this. I thought muslims and africans were 'invading us' via immigration and had loads of other questionable views, thankfully, i managed to crawl out of that hole.

Anyway, the Alt-Right seems to have unfortunately risen to prominence in both Europe and the US recently with examples being the rise of National Rally in France, the rise of the AFD in Germany and the rise of groups such as the Proud Boys and Oath Keepers in the US.

Due to this, i think it's more important than ever to stress that it is not "Intolerant" to not tolerate intolerance, It's not "censorship" to tell nazis to fuck off and most importantly, those who speak with anger and hate should be ignored and paid no heed, as chances are they simply crave power, not prosperity for all.

"The West has fallen. Billions must die!"

Alternative Right is an informal grouping of culturally right-wing ideologies which are grouped together usually by being opposed to mainstream politics and, in fact, being associated with each other more so in what they are against, instead of what they are for. Ideologies which have been classed as Alt-Right include Ethnonationalism, Racial Nationalism (especially white nationalism) and modern forms of Fascism and Nazism.

Alter-Globalism

I'm mostly in support of this one, total economic globalisation has caused the collapse of conventional union jobs in the west, tanking union membership which reduces worker protections. It also contributed to sweatshops in developing nations.

I'm also in favour of the other values that Alter-Globalism shares, which include, economic justice, the autonomy of peoples, the democratization of institutions, protecting the environment, stopping the overexploitation of resources and protecting fundamental human rights

I am happy to call this ideology good, even if some of the supporters of it can be a bit too extreme Anti-Capitalist.

"Another world is possible!"

Alter-Globalism believes in global cooperation of nations while at the same time opposing economic globalization. He thinks that economic globalization will harm the workers and reduce civil rights. It is anti-imperialist and supports global solidarity while preserving native cultures as well.

American Model

This is not strictly an Ideology, but i'm gonna review it anyway.

While personal liberties are good, the "right" to bear arms is one of the cases where restrictions must be imposed. Your right to swing your arms ends where another man's nose begins, y'know?

I've also already made my opinion on free market capitalism known in this slideshow.

As for Freedom Of Expression, i think it's an extremely important right. If you cannot criticize your government without legal repercussion, then it's likely your government deserves to be criticized.

Finally, i'm still on the fence about federalism. On one hand, it's good for local citizens to have a council with people who live in and understand the local area.

On the other hand, It's easy to get carried away to the point that many things in one state are illegal compared to a neighbouring state.

Basically, local areas should be allowed to make their own laws but only with national oversight, to prevent legal fracturing.

"America, fuck yeah!"

The American Model is the political and economic model of the United States of America. The American Model uses capitalism as its economic system with an emphasis on free enterprise. Additionally, The American Model believes in maintaining a liberal society, upholding strong civil liberties for every citizen, such as freedom of expression and the right to bear arms, as well as advocating for representative democracy and republicanism. American Model supports federalism, granting states and localities some independence from the central government.

Anarcha-Feminism

And here begins the massive amount of anarchist ideologies...

Anyway, I have no problem with feminism, it's obvious that women face systematic and cultural discrimination in society and that should be addressed and fixed.

However, Anarchism is a naive ideology that believes people can naturally cooperate without descending into different tribes/groups.

History has shown that a lack of central authority causes only disorder and destruction.

An at least loose hierarchy is needed for a society larger than a small village to function properly.

"If I can't dance, I don't want to be in your revolution."

Anarcha-Feminism believes that the patriarchy is a direct result of a hierarchy and that dissolving the state comes with the abolition of the patriarchy.

Anarchism

This is a broad term for all anarchist ideologies, so i have no specific criticism apart from what i said before, which i will now copy and paste

Anarchism is a naive ideology that believes people can naturally cooperate without descending into different tribes/groups.

History has shown that a lack of central authority causes only disorder and destruction.

An at least loose hierarchy is needed for a society larger than a small village to function properly.

No gods, no masters! There are no rules!

Anarchism is an ideology that advocates for a society without rulers or constituted authority, with a focus on the notion of freedom. One universal and defining aspect of anarchism is opposition to "the state" (typically defined as an entity with a monopoly on violence) and centralized bureaucratic governance.

Anarcho-Capitalism

Somehow even worse than usual Anarchism, while also barely even counting as Anarchist since 'free market' companies would likely just form their own corporatocracy upon the abolition of the state.

Obviously a government run by private companies is a terrible idea, as many fictional dystopias have shown.

I think that's all i have to say for this one,

"Welcome to Ancapistan!"

Anarcho-Capitalism is a political ideology based around the Classical Liberal conception of property rights and rejection of the state but lead to its logical conclusion, the elimination of it. It favours market-based alternatives for all services that most modern states currently provide, including roads, education, healthcare, the issuing of currency and banking, law, security and national defense.

Anarcho-Collectivism

A fully worker-owned economy is already a bad idea. Obviously, workers should be paid fairly for their labour but there still needs to be people on top.

Not to a dictatorial level, but a large workplace cannot organize itself when no one can agree on who is truly in charge.

As for 'labour coins', they are a terrible and dystopian idea.

No matter how strict they are or aren't, people should not be restricted in what they can buy with the proceeds of their labour. [excluding harmful and dangerous stuff]

Overall, Anarcho-Collectivism feels like a concept that would never work in execution or at least would never prosper.

"First of all, labour coins are not traditional currency, because-" proceeds to write wall of text

Anarcho-Collectivism is an ideology that believes in a worker-owned economy seized directly by the workers with no interim state. It believes in a form of currency called labour coins which function essentially as vouchers.

Anarcho-Communism

While the concept of a “stateless, classless, and post-monetary society based on Direct Democracy” seems great, it would be likely result in warlords rising up and diverging from the original goal of Anarcho-Communism. The whole warlords thing applies to most other anarchist ideologies too.

That’s all i have to say about this one.

Also, if there is no authority, how are they gonna stop people from owning private property, which communism is against.

"A las barricadas!"

Anarcho-Communism is an ideology that believes in the abolition of the state and all structures of capital, leading to a stateless, classless, and post-monetary society based on Direct Democracy. Many AnComs view Anarcho-Communism as a way of reconciling the gap between the individual and society.

Anarcho-Conservatism

There was no songs on the wiki page, so i linked a video that summarizes what i think about Anarcho-Conservatism.

Basically, Anarcho-Conservatism is a walking contradiction. The enforcement of conservative tenets, even just by social pressure is in itself, authoritarian.

But let's say it somehow isn't, or some magic brain worm makes everyone in the commune trump supporters, Anarcho-Conservatism still sucks due to both parts of its name.

I've already talked alot about anarchy, but as for conservative ideologies, they range from painfully tolerable centerists to comically backwards authoritarians.

"Make Anarchism Great Again!"

Anarcho-Conservatism is an ideology that advocates for a stateless society that upholds Traditional values and respects traditional hierarchies. They believe that conservative tenants should be so enforced on the society that the government doesn't need to exist to enforce traditional values.

Anarcho-Distributism

I can't really respond to all of this ideology points since it would be like 2500 words or something but as for it's core basic values.

Pacifism is good, violence should only ever be a last option or used in self-defence.

Distributism works in very small scales, like a small workplace or a group of roommates, but it fully relies on everyone not being selfish and hoarding stuff. If one person hoards, everyone else will hoard in fear of the first hoarder taking everything. Then you're just back to unofficial private ownership of stuff.

And again, Anarchism is bad.

"Don't call me a saint. I don't want to be dismissed so easily"

Anarcho-Distributism is an anarchist ideology that promotes pacifism and anarchy. It is a religious ideology, specifically catholic.

Anarcho-Egoism

I don't know how to say this kindly, this ideology is really selfish. Also, if everyone prioritises only themselves, the world would be chaos. People working in communes would refuse to do anything without a long argument about how it benefits themselves as well as the whole commune.

Without the anarchism, Egoism is even worse. People not helping anyone unless there was 'something in it for them'

Frankly, it just seems dystopian, also calling stuff 'spooks' is just childish.

“Diese Bildunterschrift ist ein Spuk”

“This Caption Is a Spook”

Anarcho-Egoism is an ideology that arose out of the philosophy of Max Stirner. It emphasizes the individual over any other kind of moral or guiding principle. It proposes that most commonly accepted social institutions, including the notion of State, property as a right, natural rights in general and the very notion of society were mere "spooks" or "phantasms" in the mind.

Anarcho-Fascism

So... an authoritarian ideology but without authority, seems like a great idea.

Fascism sucks, it gives way too much power into a central ruler and also venerates a bigoted and backwards culture.

Again, Anarchism bad.

"Everything within the commune, nothing outside the commune, nothing against the commune."

Anarcho-Fascism is an ideology that wants to abolish the state and create a communal society based on the doctrine of Fascism. It is generally considered by Anarchism to be an embarrassment.

Quick Notice

Anarcho-Jazzism and Anarcho-Frontierism are being skipped due to being fully joke ideologies.

"See ya later,
космический vaquero."

"Functional Harmony is a spook!"

Anarcho-Individualism

This seems like a less extreme version of Egoism, which is good, although individualism can erode people's empathy for others.

However, individualism is good to a degree, people shouldn't be mindless identical drones.

Like most things, it's all about balancing between the two extremes of maximum and minimum.

Also, Anarchism bad.

"If the individual has the right to govern himself, all external government is tyranny."

Anarcho-Individualism is an ideology that emphasizes the individual and the will of the individual over external determinants such as society, groups, tradition, and ideologies. It sees the abolition of the state as the fullest realization of individual liberty. It believes that without any government, individuals will pursue their personal objectives and work together in mutual self-interest to create a stable and harmonious anarchist society.

Anarcho-Monarchism

This one is completely bizarre.

How can a society be monarchist while also being anarchist? Having a single established leader while also having no hierarchy?

I don't even know what to say about this since it's just completely contradictory.

"Every man a king."

Anarcho-Naturism

Ignoring the widespread amount of creeps in nudism movements, nudism, especially in an anarchist society would be extremely dangerous.

You'd be stepping on possibly dangerous stuff with your bare feet, falling over would be much more severe with no clothing to shield the body and cold winters would be basically unlivable.

Again, anarchy bad.

[No Quote Listed]

Anarcho-Naturism is an ideology that advocates for social nudity and the abolition of the state. It also believes in Veganism, Environmentalism, Free Love and Feminism.

Anarcho-Nihilism

Literal mass shooter ideology.

Seriously, the summary sounds like something that would be found in some insane guy's manifesto.

I really hope i don't have to explain how this one sucks.

"There are no demands to be made, no utopian visions to be upheld, no political programs to be followed. The path of resistance is one of pure negation"

Anarcho-Nihilism is an ideology that advocates for the complete rejection of all social institutions, including religion, law, and any form of morality. Rooted in the concept of "anarchy," meaning the absence of authority, and the Latin word "nihil," meaning "nothing," Anarcho-Nihilism holds that all systems of power, control, and belief are inherently oppressive and should be dismantled without replacement. This ideology emphasizes the individual's freedom from any external constraints, advocating for a world where no structures or ethical frameworks dictate human behavior.

Anarcho-Pacifism

Pacifism is good, i'm pretty sure most people agree that violence should only be used as self-defense or a last resort. [Even if they disagree on what self-defense exactly means].

Although i'm not exactly sure how a state would be abolished by peaceful means. Even if an Anarcho-Pacifist party won an election by a landslide, i doubt all authority could be abolished without some blood being spilt.

Again. anarchy bad.

"Guys? Can we stop fighting
please?"

Anarcho-Pacifism is an ideology that advocates for the use of nonviolent action to facilitate the abolition of the state.

Anarcho-Primitivism

I refuse to believe anyone actually believes in this ideology.

The stone age sucked since you died by 30, had to use moss as toilet paper and chase animals for miles.

Source: My grandpa, Grug.

"Farm bad, factory bad. Grug praise sun god."

Anarcho-Primitivism is an ideology that is based upon the belief that agriculture and settled civilization fundamentally lead to a lifestyle which is either unfulfilling and/or authoritarian, and that to achieve a free society, technology must be rejected and humanity should return to the Stone Age.

Anarcho-Syndicalism

While i'm all for workers rights, putting so much power into 'Syndicates' would just result in small pseudo-governments controlling several communes, which would kinda defeat the purpose of anarchism.

Trade union have an extremely important role in the economy, to protect workers from exploitation, but they should never supersede the role of their opposition, the government/businesses.

“¡El socialismo será libre o no lo será en absoluto!”

Anarcho-Syndicalism is an ideology that believes that an anarchist society should be based around decentralized worker-controlled associations under the name of "Syndicates" (which is the French word for "Trade Union", although Syndicates in this context are more sophisticated than mere trade unions). And more specifically, the achievement of anarchism by union lead strikes and direct action.

Anarcho-Totalitarianism

There's no accurate description for this on the wiki, so i'm just gonna assume this is a gimmick ideology.

Obviously, neither of those words are good, so both of them together are not just contradictory but also dystopian.

"FREEDOM. IS. SLAVERY."

[No Description]

Anarcho-Transhumanism

Transhumanism is cool and i agree corporations should not be in charge of the development of cybernetics since it will inevitably become some dystopian “pay your arms subscription or they won’t work” situation.

Although i don’t think anarchism is right for transhumanism, a strong state-funded cybernetic project with zero profit incentive is a good balance between efficiency and non-profit motives.

Again, Anarchism bad and this is the last anarchist ideology for now.

"Smash the state with technology!"

Anarcho-Transhumanism is an ideology that holds the idea that progress should not be held back by "dogmatic and oppressive institutions" (i.e. corporations and/or governments). Rather, innovation and improvement of the human condition (via nanotechnology and cybernetics) can be brought about by emphasizing survival (in fact, abolishing death completely) and cooperation, instead of competition and conquest.

Anationalism

While having a secondary 'global language' would definitely make international diplomacy and business much easier. It would be extremely hard and slow to implement.

I am somewhat in favour of one-worldism, a world government should be federalised between several regions in order to properly address local concerns.

I believe that the natural evolution of geopolitics will eventually result in a world government, although it is likely a few hundred years away.

Also. duolingo has Esperanto as a language you can learn, so that's cool.

"Unu popolo, unu nacio!"

(One people, one nation!)

Anationalism is an ideology originating within the sphere of Esperanto speakers. It believes in universalism, one-world-ism, and Esperanto as an auxiliary language shared by everyone, without replacing any existing language.

Anti-Authoritarianism

~~FUCK YOU I WON'T DO WHAT YOU TELL ME~~

Seriously, this is one of the ideologies that i happily support and identify with. Even if i am somewhat supportive of a strong state, i'm always against such a state not having democratic safeguards.

A dictatorship is a dictatorship, no matter if it's red, brown, royal purple, or anything in between.

May Democracy Prevail On All Fronts

"Down with Absolutism! Down with Fascism! Down with Bolshevism!"

Anti-Authoritarianism is an ideology whose sole defining characteristic is fervent, uncompromising opposition to Authoritarianism and strong state power. Anti-Authoritarianism is represented by the "Three Arrows", a symbol used by the Iron Front and the German Social Democratic Party in the 1930s as a symbol of resistance to Nazism, Monarchism, and Bolshevism and used in present-day contexts as a symbol of Anti-Fascism.

Anti-Centrism

This one is complete nonsense.

I'm pretty sure a government composing of every extremist ideology would tear itself apart faster than Nigel Farage's credibility.

That's it, next!

"Every extreme is on the same team!"

Anti-Centrism wants to stop centrism by any means, by unifying all extremists. It's combination of extremist ideologies do not counteract each other, instead, maximally integrating by creating extremism as a separate ideology.

Anti-Fascism

While i do agree with the anti-fascist movement in concept, many of its supporters are much too quick too quick to resort to violence in order to fight fascism.

Obviously, if a fascist movement is fully okay with using violence to achieve their goals, then it's often justified to resist those goals with equal violence.

That being said, smashing a trump supporter on the head with a bike lock just for saying offensive stuff is NOT justified at all.

That kinda sums up my love-hate relationships with Anti-Facism and why i like to identify more with anti-authoritarianism, since it has less violent nut jobs in it.

"Bash the fash!"

Anti-Fascism, is an ideology and movement centered around combating Fascism and ideologies similar to it by any means necessary, including deplatforming them through use of violence and intimidation. Despite what many people believe, Anti-Fascism is not a group or an organization, but rather a political movement. While people from all quadrants can be anti-fascist, the term Anti-Fascist itself is usually used by leftist ideologies.

Anti-Japaneseism

This is literal racism.

I understand where someone is coming from if they're chinese due to the whole... incident.

But that doesn't justify hating an entire race, even if the Japanese government doesn't help itself by downplaying the event.

Basically, racism bad.

"Anime proves that two wasn't enough"

Anti-Japaneseism claims that the Japanese themselves are the "product of Japaneses imperialism", possess an inherent "aggressive nature". Proponents of this theory believe that the only way to redeem oneself from the "oppressor and criminal Japanese race" is to fight against all Japanese interests until the "Japanese" archipelago has been purged of anything Japanese.

Anti-Radicalism

No song this time, sorry.

This is an example of a good idea stretched beyond its logical boundaries.

Many radical ideologies either don't work in practice, violent, bigoted or just insane.

That said, i feel like there should be room for non-conventional ideologies. Despite my vast disagreements with them, Marxist-Leninists should still be allowed to have a political party as long as they remain peaceful.

*"Down with fascism! Down with communism!
Down with anarchism! Down with... gay people?"*

Anti-Radicalism is an ideology that's based around the belief that ideologies outside the Overton Window or movements that are ideologically distant from the status quo are harmful to society as a whole and that political action or restrictive policies must be applied to stop them. It has variable beliefs, but typically adheres to liberal or neoliberal positions (since these function as the global status quo, and therefore the political center).

Anti-Realism

"Rejection of natural superiority not to benefit the collective is spookthink."

Anti-Realism is an ideology that believes that any ideology that fits onto a political compass is bad. Of course, steroids are spooks that assist the weak, and not distributing them amongst the commune is thoughtcrime.

Apoliticism

Apoliticism has no opinions on anything, therefore i will have no opinion on it.

"I just wanna grill for God's sake!"

Apoliticism is a non-quadrant ideology whose only defining feature is apathy towards politics.

Arab Socialism

Alright, i said way back in African Socialism, that i'm not a big fan of full non-democratic socialism and this rings true here as well.

Although i'm also against this ideology for it's affinity with generally 'dodgy' world leaders, like Bashar Al Assad, the current president of syria.

I think it's pretty close to a dictatorship ideology LARPing as a leftist.

الحرية، والاشتراكية، والوحدة
(Freedom, Socialism, and Unity)

Arab Socialism is an ideology. It supports leaders such as Gamal Abdul Nasser, Bashar Al Assad, and believes in Arab Unity. Unlike many other socialist ideologies, Arab Socialism rejects globalism and Communism. It believes in wealth redistribution, and the nationalization of some key industries, but does not want to abolish private property.

Archeofuturism

Another contradiction, although admittedly this one is pretty amusing.

I imagine this idea as some kind of advanced small village. Like farming with an ultra-efficient tractor or something.

Good idea for book/show/film, bad idea for real life.

"I want my robot arms to throw spears with!"

Archeofuturism is an ideology that believes in returning to a more primitivist lifestyle or society, while at the same time embracing futuristic and transhumanist technology.

Aristocracy

Despite the ideology in theory selecting the most 'qualified' individuals, Aristocracy often just results in a fancy oligarchy.

So like i will say with Oligarchy, it sucks.

"Bow before me, Iron-soul!"

Aristocracy refers to a system of government in which political power is concentrated within a small, privileged class of the most qualified individuals, often nobility or gentry.

Asocialism

Honestly, if the world was some kind of post-scarcity Utopia, i wouldn't be too mad at this kind of society, but sadly we live in a world of finite resources.

This surprisingly might work for a few years if planned well and automation tech gets good enough, although... a society like this would be extremely vulnerable to cyber-warfare, even more than our real world.

I guess if i had to rate this ideology out of 10, i'd give it 4.

"Let's socialize production without socializing."

Asocialism is an ideology that wants to provide decent living conditions to every citizen without them ever having to meet nor interact with one another. It uses rationally planned production chains with a big level of automation to sustain an industrial or post-industrial society without needing the physical concentration of people, such as in factories or offices. Due to the high degree of planning inherent to Asocial Socialism, economic freedom is restricted, each citizen having limited purchasing power as well as a natural resource consumption credit calculated to make the asocialist economy sustainable.

Athenian Democracy

Okay. i don't fully understand this one since the wiki page explains very little, sorry

[No Quote]

There are three political bodies where citizens gathered in numbers running into the hundreds or thousands. These are the assembly, the council of 500, and the courts. Of these three bodies, the assembly and the courts are the true sites of power. Citizens voting in any assembly or court are not subject to review and prosecution, as are council members and all other officeholders.

Austrian School

Not a fan of unregulated capitalism, i think most people can figure out that little to no regulation causes nothing but harm to consumers at the hands of money-hungry corporations.

Also, this was the economic ideology of this bitch, so that's another point docked.

"The only fair is laissez-faire!"

Okay. i can't really paste something from the wiki that neatly describes it here, so basically, It's the belief that the free market is the best system for an economy.

Austrofascism

So this was basically Austrian facism before germany annexed them.

Obviously this one sucks, fascism is terrible and was the main catalyst for world war 2.

That's all i have to say, the Austrian variant is no better.

"Wir Jungen stehen bereit! Mit Dollfuß in die neue Zeit!
(We young ones are standing by! With Dollfuss into the new time!)"

Austrofascism is an ideology that believes in a form of fascism that had uniquely Austrian characteristics such as Austrian nationalism, Catholicism, Corporatism, and opposition to Pan-Germanism.

Austromarxism

Compared to the previous ideology, i find this one much more tolerable, although i'm still not in support of it.

A 'gradual evolution towards socialism' is much less likely to result in deadly consequences, although that doesn't leave the whole 'does full-on socialism actually work' answered.

I much prefer it's modern variant, democratic socialism.

[No Quote]

Austromarxism is an offshoot of Marxism originating in inter-war Austria. It sought to integrate the ideas of Social Democracy with the more revolutionary forms of Socialism. Austromarxist theorists believed in left-wing nationalism. Otto Bauer argued that the workers national identity mattered, and that nationalism and patriotism are not obstructive towards class consciousness. Austromarxism believes in the establishment of a synthesis between social democracy and revolutionary socialism. Bauer believed that a socialist revolution had a low chance at success in Austria. He popularized the idea of a gradual evolution towards socialism.

Autarchy

While i do believe that people should not be forced into systems against their interest, this is a much too extreme version of that idea.

Society needs various mandatory systems in order of function, like taxes, laws and punishment for those laws.

Making these voluntary would negate the entire point of laws while also making a government unable to fund itself, since most people would not willingly pay taxes.

"Welcome to Me-stan. Population:
1"

Autarchy is an ideology that advocates for the abolition of any attempt to rule over another individual. Autarchy believes each individual should rule themselves. Any system the individual is a part of must be voluntary. Autarchy promotes the philosophical ideals of individualism and moral self-reliance.

Authoritarian Capitalism

One of the worst non-extremist ideologies out there.

An Authoritarian government who heavily supports corporations and capitalism is no different to a corporatocracy.

“The core of this argument lies in the view that citizens will support whichever regime provides the most material comforts” is a terrible argument. Sure, some people will happily sit by and let a capitalist government screw them over, although i’m sure some people, especially an ever increasing lower-class who can’t afford these ‘material comforts’ would sure love to torch a few government buildings.

Basically, as companies increase prices to “keep up with inflation” [make more money], More and more people would be unable to afford, eventually reaching a tipping point of revolution, riots, anarchy or just good old fashioned governmental decay.

*“Power and the money! Money and the power!
Minute after minute! Hour after hour!”*

Authoritarian Capitalism is an ideology advocating for a system in which a capitalist market economy exists alongside an authoritarian government. Authoritarian capitalists argue that by utilizing elements of Capitalism, regimes may more effectively employ modern technologies to suppress dissidence towards government. In addition, it is argued that capitalist free-market policies leads to an increase in authoritarian policies. The core of this argument lies in the view that citizens will support whichever regime provides the most material comforts.

Authoritarian Conservatism

"It's better to be a dictator than gay" - Actual quote from Alexander Lukashenko, current president of Belarus.

This one sucks, it's all the social values of 'protecting traditional families' and
'preserving proper values' that i despise with all the subtle enforcement of a tank in tiananmen square

Basically, screw 'traditional values' that condemn people for living their own life and fuck authoritarians who enforce those values with blood and guns.

"Go to horny jail!"

Authoritarian Conservatism is an ideology.
It believes in a society following traditional values enforced through the state and typically takes the form of an autocratic government built on conservative social values.

Authoritarianism

With the last two ideologies, i think i made it clear that Authoritarianism sucks.

"If the jury hangs, so do you..."

Authoritarianism is a form of government characterized by strong (usually central) power that demands obedience to authority and limited political and civil freedoms. While a multitude of different typologies has been developed by political scientists to classify authoritarian states, qualities commonly associated with authoritarian regimes include the absence of free and competitive democratic elections and one-party state, as well as censorship, and minimal power restrictions. Though sometimes authoritarianism can reside in democratic countries with free and fair elections where there's a clampdown on liberties instead as well as more emphasis on authority.

Autocracy

Yeah this one sucks too, power should be split between at least a council of people in order to prevent dictatorship, tyranny or just some insane guy coming to power.

Also, sorry these opinions are short, i think the widely rejected ideologies are hard to speak about at length.

"No one man should have all that power except me!"

Autocracy is an ideology that believes the supreme political power to direct all the activities of the state should be concentrated in the hands of one person.

Autonomism

Civil disobedience is a great tactic to encourage changes, but the fact it's a marxist ideology makes me assume that it implies some violent action to force a complete regime change.

This kind of violent revolution almost always results in a hellish civil war and the loss of the original revolution's ideals into various splinter groups.

"Disobedience to authority is one of the most natural and healthy acts!"

Autonomism is an anti-authoritarian form of Marxism. It wants the working class to force changes without the state, trade unions, or political parties.

Avaritionism

Literal serial killer ideology.

I hope i don't have to say why this one sucks. Please have empathy.

Empathy is a spook.

Avaritionism is an ideology that believes that an individual should be able to do anything they desire (i.e, live according to their avaritions), resulting in the stronger individuals rising to the top, and killing off those that are weaker.

Ba'athism

I 75% disagree with this one. The anti-theocracy and secularism bits are good but everything else is either questionable or downright sucks.

Anti-zionism is one i agree with in theory, but people who use the term anti-zionist seem to just use it as cover for straight up anti-semitism.

Also, Saddam Hussein was a tyrant, even if he didn't have any WMDs.

وحدة، حرية، اشتراكية

(Unity, Freedom, Socialism)"

Ba'athism is an Authoritarian unity, Arab Nationalist, and anti-zionist ideology, Ba'athists believe in a unified Arab state led by a secular government under a vanguard party with a state capitalist economy. Ba'athism is very anti-pornography, hates Wahhabists and theocracies, and despises (western) imperialism. Ba'athism in Iraq tends to be more Right-Wing, While Ba'athism in Syria tends to be more Left-Wing.

Babouvism

I like this one in theory although like with communism, i feel like it would never work in practice.

Unfortunately, a fully egalitarian system is almost impossible due to the many factors and details of society.

Also, someone please free the polcombball in the art, he's crying and it's making me cry.

People of France; Open your eyes and your hearts to the fullness of happiness: recognize and proclaim with us the Republic of Equals!

Babouvism is an ideology considered by many to be the first revolutionary communist ideology in history. It strives for the creation of a fully egalitarian system without private property and became a crucial foundation of Marxism.

Banana Republicanism

Thanks to the CIA, this was the dominant ideology in latin america in the 20th century, so thanks for that, Feds.

Obviously, this one sucks and is basically feudalism by another name.

"The bananas must flow."

Banana Republicanism is an ideology where a whole country's economy depends on upon the exportation of a limited-resource product, such as bananas or minerals. The country is lead by a de facto ruling class who hold control over the main export by exploitation of labor of the nation. Then there is an impoverished middle class who collect the product.

Barracks Communism

This is like Rimworld ideology or something. Since colonists in that game are called Pawns, i don't think it's a good sign.

People should have at least some freedom to choose their role in a society, not just assigned by a faceless government.

Also, the song link eventually sends you down a tankie rabbit hole, so that's fun.

"Not a military barracks, a workers' barracks."

Barracks Communism is an authoritarian left ideology representing Russian Nihilist Sergey Nechayev, which is described by Karl Marx as a type of communism enforcing Collectivism and communism to the point where every point of life is organized and controlled in the strictest way

Benefactorism

Since this is designed to be as terrible as possible, it's obvious that this one sucks.

Nothing much else to say.

"WE"

Benefactorism is an ideology, based on Yevgeny Zamyatin's dystopian novel "WE". It is the belief that rationality and equality are superior to imagination and individuality. It claims for a total surveillance of society, as well as completely planned and synchronized lives, possessions, workspaces, movements, schedules, etc. Benefactorism's name comes from the Benefactor, a giant robotic entity that is the head leader of the One State.

Big Tent Liberalism

This is like the stock music of politics, i'll tolerate it but i'd prefer something more distinct and interesting.

That said, A Big Tent Liberal Government is much more preferable to a right-wing government.

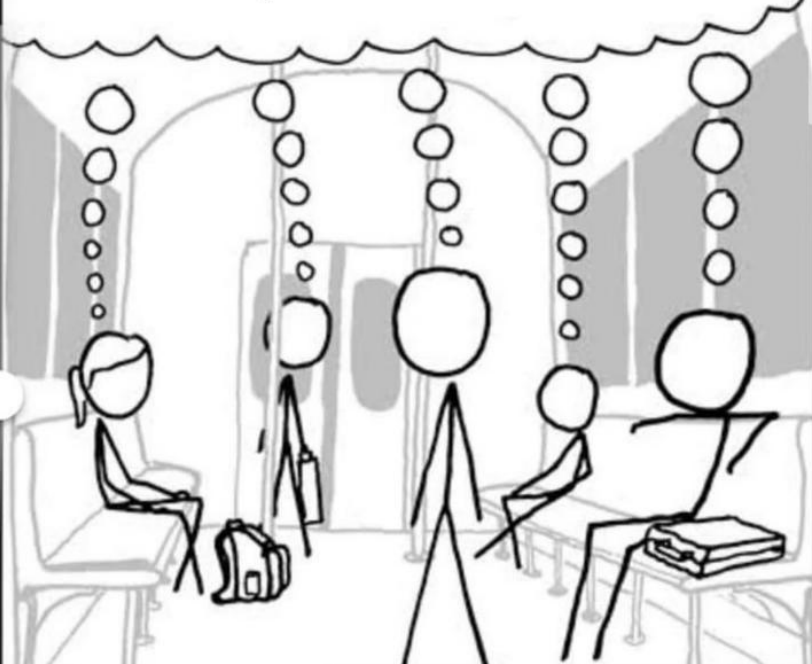

"BIGGEST. TENT."

Big Tent Liberalism, is an ideology that seeks to incorporate elements of various types of liberalism to accommodate a common goal.

Bio-Posadism

Literally this meme

I can't wait for society to collapse, so my ideology can rise triumphant from the ashes

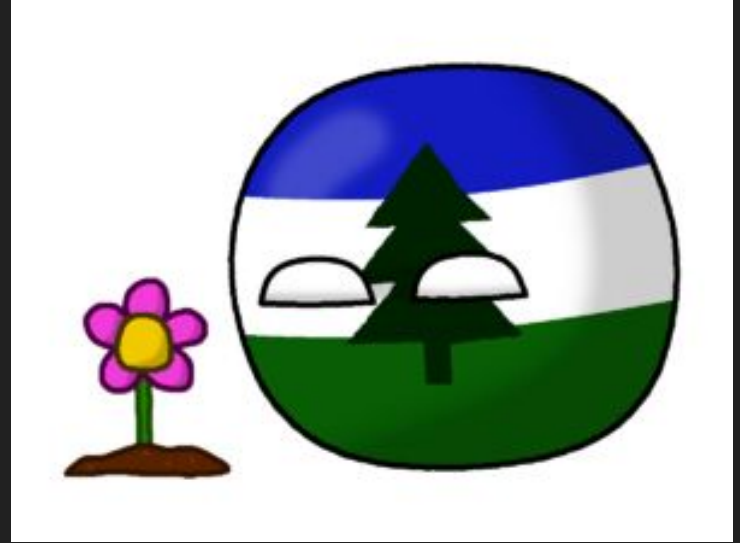

"Viruses of the world, unite!"

Bio-Posadism is an ideology that believes that Socialism can be fully achieved after society's downfall with a pandemic. They believe that other non-human civilizations with socialist ideals exist and that they can help humanity recover into a socialist utopia.

Bioregionalism

This is a pretty good ideology, Environmentalism is nice and the free market does indeed incentivise negligent environmental practices.

If this was a political party, i'd be happy to join it. This one gets the rare seal of approval.

[No Quote]

Bioregionalism is an ideology that emphasizes the profound influence of a region's climate, flora, fauna, and overall environment on the behavior, culture, and social structures of its communities. Bioregionalism advocates for sustainable practices that prioritize the well-being of both human and non-human life. It argues that economic systems should work in harmony with the environment, promoting stewardship and ecological balance to enhance the quality of life within these regions. Critically opposed to Capitalism, Bioregionalism contends that the capitalist focus on profit and free markets often leads to environmental degradation and the exploitation of natural resources, aligning more closely with Socialism in its critique of free markets and its emphasis on community and collective responsibility. Bioregionalists believe that economic practices should prioritize sustainability, community resilience, and social equity, rather than the pursuit of individual profit.

Bismarckism

While Bismarck was an admirable individual due to the things mentioned in the ideology description, this ideology is not the best of his legacy.

Being the 'kickstarter of conservatism' is a good way to a kick down the stairs from me.

Then again, constitutional monarchy was a good step in the right direction from the previously near absolute monarchies that populated Europe at the time.

This ideology is a very mixed bag, so I'm afraid it's not getting a pass.

"Für Kaiser, Gott und Vaterland!"

Bismarckism is an Ideology from the late 1800s which mixes the ideals of Paternalistic Conservatism and Constitutional Monarchism which is based on the political and economic program of Otto Von Bismarck. Otto Von Bismarck was known to be the man who kickstarted Conservatism in Germany. Bismarck is viewed to be a hero by many due to unifying the German States, forging the modern German Identity, challenging the authority of Austria within the German sphere, and leading Germany against the Second French Empire in the Franco-Prussian war.

Black Anarchism

God dammit, i thought we covered all the anarchist ideologies.

I'm all for racial justice but i've made my opinion about anarchy pretty clear many times in this slideshow before.

Also the description should get a medal for those mental gymnastics it's performing.

The quote is misspelled on the wiki BTW, so i just made my first edit on it to fix it, yay.

"Mother Anarchy doesn't discriminate!"

Black Anarchism ideology, which claims that the state has never treated Black Americans as full citizens, so, by default, African Americans are in a state of anarchy and in opposition with the state.

Black Hundredism

~~Putin be like~~

Yeah this one sucks for obvious reasons, enough said.

"За Веру, Царя и Отечество!"

Black-Hundredism is an ideology based on the Black Hundreds movement in early 20th century Russia. It was based on strong support for the House of Romanov and violently opposed any form of retreat from the autocratic rule of the Tsardom. It is also notable for its extremist views which were mainly composed of xenophobic and prejudiced beliefs such as its strong anti-Ukrainian rhetoric as well as anti-Semitic and anti-Masonic ideals.

Black Islamism

This sucks too, Remember guys, it's still racism no matter the target or perpetrator.

"Hotep brothers and sisters"

Black Islamism, is a mix of black separatism, Afro-centrism, socially right-wing, cult religious fundamentalism, and racial supremacist belief held by the Nation of Islam which maintains that black people are superior to people of other races.

Black Nationalism

While i do support this ideology in concept, the whole nationalism part of it rubs me the wrong way. Any form of ethnonationalism is horrible. That said, black people have suffered greatly due to colonialism, slavery or just general racism.

These kinda subjects are very sensitive, so all i'm gonna say for certain is that the whole New Afrika idea was far too extreme

"Black Lives Matter!"

Black Nationalism is an ideology that advocates social, political, and economic empowerment of black communities and people, especially to resist assimilation into common culture (through integration or otherwise) and maintain a distinct identity. In the 19th century, some proposed that Africans in the United States were a nation within a nation "New Afrika", and that this nation is subject to Internal colonialism. On the societal scale, the ideology is usually progressive but some of its followers can be rather conservative.

Black Zionism

I'm not reviewing this ideology since the cover art and quote has some very racist implications.

Do better, Polcombball Wiki

Blanquism

Yeah... taking the most radical line possible and not compromising seems like a great way to get either nowhere or plunge into a civil war.

The idea of being 'the most radical' is foolish anyway, there will always be a more radical ideology, as this slideshow proves.

"He who has iron has bread."

Blanquism is an ideology and revolutionary strategy based on the ideas of Louis Auguste Blanqui. It advocates for revolutionaries to take the most radical line possible, and to never accept compromises in any situation at all. It also believes in the idea that revolutions are dictated by a small minority through careful planning.

Bleeding-Heart Libertarianism

This one is half-good.

The free market and gun ownership sucks, but everything else about this ideology is cool.

"I want gay couples to be able to protect their marijuana plants with guns!"

Bleeding-Heart Libertarianism is an Ideology that is the synthesis of Libertarianism and Progressivism. Bleeding-Heart Libertarianism believes that negative rights and free markets are compatible, and are also complementary to the concept of social justice. Bleeding-heart libertarianism support open borders policy.

Blueshirtism

Just when you think fascism couldn't get worse, these guys add some religion into the mix.

Admittedly, this was one of the 'least fascist fascist' ideologies in this list, but that doesn't change the fact it's utterly repulsive and bigoted.

"Shoulders together, forwards forever!"

"To triumph, we march for square!"

Blueshirtism is an ideology based on the ideas of Catholic Fascism in Ireland. The ideology was practiced by the short-lived political party Army Comrades Association, later called the National Guard, then Young Ireland and for the final time, the League of Youth, it was well known as The Blueshirts.

Bolivarianism

I am in support of people having their national independence, although not when it takes precedence over the independence of others.

Latin-America is a non homogeneous culture and has many different sub-cultures which would cause many social problems in a unified Latin-American state.

¡Unión!

Bolivarianism is an ideology that uses Nationalistic, Patriotic, and Pan-Nationalistic ideas used predominantly in Venezuela and Colombia. It is based on the Ideas of Simon Bolivar for creating an unified Latin-American state.

Bonapartism

While Napoleon was a brilliant general, this ideology sucks due to the whole authoritarian and undemocratic thing.

That's it, not much else to say.

"Success is the most convincing talker in the world"

Bonapartism is an ideology based on the beliefs of Napoleon Bonaparte and his followers and successors. In the broadest sense, it aims to establish a nation-state with a strong and centralized executive which is authoritarian and largely undemocratic but relied on plebiscites to rise to power both times.

Brazilian Integralism

Another fascist, although very slightly less authoritarian due to the independent business policy, that doesn't make it any better than any other fascist.

Deus, Pátria e Família! Anauê.

Brazilian Integralism broadly believes there should be "a fully integrated social and political order, based on converging inherited political, cultural, religious, and national traditions of a particular state." While Integralism refers to a broad set of movements, which vary from nation to nation, this is specifically about the Brazilian interpretation of it. It is not fascism in the way it's commonly understood, but is "paleo-fascist," to be more accurate. While fascism supports the creation of corporations dependent on the state, integralism wants to create organic and independent ones, not interfering in anyone's jobs or companies.

British Fascism

Yet another fascist, we're really piling on the Hitler bootlickers in the B section, aren't we.

Again, fuck facism.

"Perish Judah!"

British Fascism is an umbrella term used to refer primarily to the ideology of Oswald Mosley, and by extension his political party: the British Union of Fascists. The BUF purports to be economically third positionist, culturally far-right, authoritarian and nationalist, with anti-capitalist, anti-communist and anti-interventionist leanings.

Buddhist Anarchism

While i think Buddhism is one of the least problematic religions since it mostly sticks true to the whole 'peaceful' doctrine, i don't think any religion should have a theocracy in a nation, city or in this case, Anarchist Commune.

I've also made my opinion about Anarchism very clear before, so again, Anarchism doesn't work.

"The Buddha was an Anarchist"

Buddhism Anarchism is rooted in three fundamental truths of the universe, the dharma seals,

Everything is in a constant state of change, nothing is permanent.

That "suffering" exists everywhere in Samsara.

That everything is devoid of a "self."

Thus, there can be no "perfect State" in Samsara. Any man-made institution is impermanent as well as imperfect, as people and the world change constantly.

Buddhist Socialism

Again, Theocracy bad but at least this one somewhat aligns with my own economic views.

The implication of non-democratic socialism isn't great tho, even a perfect ruler should periodically judged by their populace.

"The freedom to hoard was tightly controlled by nature in the form of natural socialism."

Buddhist Socialism is a form of Religious Socialism which combines the beliefs and ethics of Buddhism with Socialism. Buddhist socialists believe Buddha and Buddhism preach for socialism and follow its teachings and practices while trying to create a Buddhist society. Buddhism and socialism seek to end suffering by analyzing its conditions and removing its main causes through praxis. Both also seek to provide a transformation of personal consciousness to end human alienation and selfishness.

Buddhist Theocracy

Again, i have some respect for Buddhism due to actually being a religion of peace.

However, that doesn't give it the right to impose their restrictions on others via a theocratic government.

Live how you want, just don't push it onto those who do not follow it.

"The mind is everything. What you think, you become."

Buddhist Theocracy is an ideology advocating for a government based on Buddhism. Buddhism originated in India, based on the teachings, of Siddhartha Gautama, later known as Gautama Buddha. A Buddha is one who is said to be awake to the truth of life. The core of Buddhists beliefs are centered on the four noble truths, the noble eight-fold path and the five precepts.

Bull Moose Progressivism

This one is pretty good although due to its differences with regular progressivism, i wouldn't say it's a great ideology.

Nevertheless, it's still in the upper half of the ideologies on this list.

"BULLY"

Bull Moose Progressivism (BMP) is an ideology prominent in the United States of America between the period of time after the Gilded Age and before the end of the First World War. Bull Moose Progressive wants a 'Square Deal' for all citizen as well as a strong military and trust busting. Bull Moose Progressive has some similarities to modern Progressivism, as both want welfare programs, improvements for workers rights, and transparency of political campaign contributions, but they differ in several meaningful ways.

Firstly: its positive attitude towards nationalism and military intervention instead of multicultural internationalism.

Secondly: it's more positive attitude towards traditional masculinity compared to modern progressivism's more negative attitude.

Thirdly: having less of a focus on modern cultural issues due the fact it was prominent in the past.

Bundism

The description of this one is pretty good.

And that's all i'm gonna say about this since anything related to Israel that i haven't done at least 10 hours of research on scares me.

פֿאַר פֿרייהייט!

Bundism is a socialist, slightly libertarian, and progressive ideology, whose main objective is cultural autonomy. The Bundist movement was a Jewish movement, which sought autonomy, along with social equality and individual freedom.

Byzantine Model

Monarchism and religious empires suck.

Although, being one of the first centralised states in europe was a impressive. Especially since most communication back then was based on people carrying notes to the next town over and back.

Good job Byzantine, sad you got steamrolled by the Ottomans.

Βασιλεὺς Βασιλέων, Βασιλεύων Βασιλευόντων”

(King of Kings, Ruler over Rulers)

The Byzantine Model is a term that refers to the political system of the Byzantine Empire as well as implementations of its system. The Byzantine model was notable for being extremely bureaucratic, with it effectively being the most centralised state in medieval Europe. Byzantinism lived on despite the Byzantine Empire's collapse, being adopted throughout the empire's spiritual successors in Russia and the Balkans, and to a lesser extent in Germany and France.

Caesarism

While the Roman Empire was a truly powerful force to be reckoned with, the methods it used to achieve such power were not exactly good to say the least.

As the description mentions, Rome pillaged towns and killed 'barbarians' [non-romans who fought back against the mentioned pillaging].

At the same time, land reforms and giving grain to all citizens is admirable, unfortunately it does not excuse such horrific actions committed by the empire throughout its history.

As an ideology meant to mimic the Roman Empire, it inherits the empire's crimes.

"Veni, Vidi, Vici."

Caesarism is an ideology that follows the ideals of the Roman Empire. Caesarism is a very broad ideology since there were many Roman Emperors. Caesar himself conquered and pillage many barbarians, but was also noted for land reforms and giving grain to every citizen across the empire. Through this combination, Rome would not fit today's standards of left or right but would be in between, enslaving barbarians and feeding the citizens alike through a strong state. Rome would inspire Fascism, and many European Monarchies.

Cameralism

This one is good in theory, but its implications are concerning.

Does 'creating the largest amount of profit for the state' mean screwing over workers for profit, just like corporations?

If it does, then this ideology is no better than uncontrolled capitalism.

[No Quote]

Cameralism is an ideology which is the German variant of Mercantilism. Cameralism believes in an economy that is centralized in such a manner that it creates the largest amount of profit for the state. In order to achieve independence or self-sufficiency.

Capitalism

While the concept of capitalism can be good, without strict controls it can quickly turn into corruption, greed and mass poverty.

In other words..

"Capitalism: God's way of determining who is smart and who is poor."

Capitalism is an economic system based on the private ownership of the means of production and their operation for profit. In a market economy, decision-making and investments are determined by owners of wealth, property, or ability to maneuver capital or production ability in capital and financial markets—whereas prices and the distribution of goods and services are mainly determined by competition in goods and services markets.

Capitalist Communism

While this does seem like a walking contradiction, it does [debatably] exist in the form of the People's Republic Of China.

As shown by China, this system does appear to produce extreme wealth and prosperity. Unfortunately, this is at the cost of freedom. China has a score of 9/100 in the Freedom House rankings, for comparison, the United Kingdom scored 91/100.

Due to my personal values, i will not prioritize 'economic power' of freedom, therefore this ideology is a deal breaker for me.

"When due to a speculative market you sell your McCommune™ stocks at a 200% profit"

Capitalist Communism is an ideology representing the unity between the far sides of economic left and far sides of the economic right. It wants the state to use the capitalist zones to the advantage of the communist state. The state is more powerful than the capitalist corporations and is seen to control them. This usually manifests in CapCom representing Dengism, which is basically a communist state that allows capitalism and free-market and free-enterprise in certain zones of its territory.

Capitalist Transhumanism

This is literally the plot of 50 different dystopian novels, no thanks.

“Pay your Tec-Arm subscription or your arms will disable” - A statement thought of by the utterly deranged.

"The natural exchanges of nature may have produced our original forms, but the natural exchanges of the market will produce our next"

Capitalist Transhumanism is an ideology that believes that free markets and advancement of human technology are complementary to each other and both should be encouraged.

Carlism

Yeah no thanks. I have no idea how someone managed to subscribe to an ideology that's main point is now entirely irrelevant, but you do you.

Also its other values suck too.

"¡Dios! ¡Patria! ¡Fueros! ¡Rey!"

("God! Fatherland! Local Rule! King!")

Carlism is a political and cultural movement in Spain that emerged in the early 19th century as a response to the succession dispute following the death of King Ferdinand VII. The movement sought to place Don Carlos, Count of Molina, on the Spanish throne, representing an alternative branch of the Bourbon dynasty. Rooted in traditionalist and legitimist principles, Carlism rejected the liberal and progressive ideas gaining traction in Spain at the time, particularly those threatening the influence of the Catholic Church and the monarchy's divine right. Over the years, Carlism splitted and branched off, but its core traditional ideals— monarchism, traditional Catholicism, and a rejection of liberal progressivism—have remained largely consistent on the main factions of the movement.

Caste System

This sucks, i don't think i have to say why.

"Prove to me that you are worthy to bake a cake."

Caste System is a system of governance in which groups of people are separated into socio-economic groups by job classification or birth and are generally only allowed to marry within their caste, often by family rules. In a Caste System there are traditionally four castes: The religious caste, The military caste, The merchant/landowner caste, and The manual labour caste. With there sometimes being 'untouchables' who are outside the caste system and specifically condemned due to their sins or untechnical life.

Catholic Theocracy

Like i said with the Buddhist variant of this, theocracies suck.

No one should force their religious principles upon others, no matter the religion being used.

Also, the Catholic church shouldn't be used for moral guidance, in my opinion.

"Sic Transit Gloria Mundi."

Catholic Theocracy is an ideology that seeks to have the values of the Catholic faith upheld as the law and to have a state very closely tied to the Catholic Church.

Catholic Workerism

While catholicism isn't great, this is a more tolerable variant. Again. Anarchism sucks but it is slightly more preferable to an authoritarian theocracy.

Support The Labour Catholicism Movement!

Catholic Workerism is an ideology that wants to have an Anarchist society with a collection of autonomous communities of Catholics. Their aim is to live in accordance with the justice and charity of Jesus Christ.

Caudillismo

Everything about this ideology sucks.

Apart from the cover art, that's metal af.

[NO QUOTE]

Caudillismo is an ideology based around Latino nationalism, military power, and a reliance on a powerful military strongman known as a Caudillo. Caudillismo as an ideology started with the personality cults of leaders in the Latin American Wars of Independence and became a defining feature of Latino authoritarianism. Some defining traits of Caudillos are Latino chauvinism, being the heads of powerful military dictatorships, and cults of personality.

Centralism

Personally i'm in favour of a decentralised system similar to the current British system.

In my opinion, the order of authority goes from least to most powerful as:

- . Local Councils
- . County Council
- . National Council
- . Parliament

So in short, i don't support this one.

"I AM the senate."

Centralism is an ideology that advocates for a Unitary State. A unitary state is a state in which political power is held by a single central government, instead of it being spread amongst states, provinces, federations, or the like.

Ceremonial Monarchism

While this ideology is much less harmful than absolute monarchy, it still represents an elitist upper class in a country that ironically, are often funded by tax money.

A tax-funded ceremonial monarch is the only true 'welfare leech' in a society.

"Who needs power? Certainly not me."

Ceremonial Monarchism is a political ideology and the most common form of monarchy today. In a ceremonial monarchy, the monarchy is limited to only ceremonial functions, while actually running the country is left up to someone else, usually the parliament and the head of government.

Chavismo

While i am a fan of democratic socialism, i should make the distinction that this variant of it sucks due to the highly authoritarian aspect of it. Also, the recent elections in Venezuela had soldiers at polling stations and alleged voter fraud, so that shouldn't prove the ideology is good or popular.

A better version of democratic socialism would be one where the police don't slaughter people after an election.

I know it's a right-wing talking point to make fun of the whole "Not real socialism" claim, but Chavismo does not represent most democratic socialists.

¡Gloria a la Revolución Bolivariana!

Chavismo is an ideology based on the ideas of former Venezuelan president Hugo Chávez and combining the ideologies of Democratic Socialism, Social Patriotism, Trotskyism, Left-Wing Populism, Socialism of the 21st Century and Bolivarianism. Some of its proponents are progressive, while others are traditionalist. It has been the leading ideology in Venezuela since 1999.

Chicago School

This is just the american variant of the austrian school of thought.

Laissez faire sucks and leads only to corporate greed.

The wiki page doesn't have much more info about this one, sorry/

"A society that puts equality before freedom will get neither. A society that puts freedom before equality will get a high degree of both."

Chicago School is quite a simple ideology, it's based on the thought of the Chicago School of Economics, which is a Neoclassical school of economics associated with the University of Chicago, mostly known for the Libertarian economist of second generation, and Nobel prize winner, Milton Friedman.

Chinese Theocracy

As is well known, China's long history as an imperial theocracy contains many, many civil wars.

Returning to that kind of system is not ideal.

"Mandated by Heaven; Live long and prosper."

(受命於天, 既壽永昌)

Chinese Theocracy is an ideology that believes that the Chinese Folk Religion should be the state religion. The state would be ruled autocratically, with an emperor at the top. The emperor's responsibilities include protecting the citizens, ensuring fair taxation, rebuilding infrastructure, and treating the people fairly. Failure to do so may result in the loss of the Mandate of Heaven, leading to the potential overthrow of the leader.

Christian Anarchism

Anarchy sucks and theocracies suck.

Therefore an Anarchist Theocracy double sucks.

Also, an Anarchist Theocracy would have no official way to enforce it's religious dogmas, so that means the more zealous of the commune would have to 'correct' sinners themselves, which isn't great.

"One God, no masters"

Christian Anarchism claims Anarchism is inherent in Christianity and the Gospels. They are grounded in the belief that there is only one source of authority to which Christians are ultimately answerable: the authority of God as embodied in the teachings of Jesus. They therefore reject the idea that human governments have ultimate authority over human societies. Christian Anarchism denounces the state, believing it is violent, deceitful and, when glorified, idolatrous.

Christian Democracy

While this one isn't a theocracy and therefore a bit more tolerable, its generally conservative beliefs is why i oppose it.

Also, despite being democratic, basing any society off of 'traditional values of the church' isn't a great idea, especially if it's the catholic church

"Ad Montes Oculos Levavi."

Christian Democracy is a mix between Christian Theocracy and Liberal Democracy. Christian Democracy's beliefs largely vary from country to country but what usually stays consistent is the belief that the state that works within a democratic framework should enforce traditional values of the church.

Christian Socialism

Out of the christian ideologies, this one is the most agreeable for me.

While i don't like the reasoning for socialism being 'because bible says so', i am a fan of the goal [as long as it's democratic socialism]

"Again I tell you, it is easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God." Matthew 19:24.

Christian Socialism is an ideology that believes a socialist society is endorsed by the Holy Bible and the teachings of Jesus of Nazareth. He condemns Capitalism for being idolatrous and for promoting the Deadly Sin of greed, among other sins.

Christian Theocracy

I'll repeat it again.

No matter the religion, a theocracy infringes of the freedom of other religions and that of atheists.

No matter if it's 'moderate' or radical, either way, the very idea of a central authority publicly declaring one religion correct and all others wrong without extraordinary evidence to back up such an extraordinary claim is inherently oppressive.

"For though I should walk in the midst of the shadow of death, I will fear no evils, for thou art with me. Thy rod and thy staff, they have comforted me."

Christian Theocracy depends on the type of Christianity (Calvinists on the far right, Catholics center left, etc.). It believes that a strong, Christian government is necessary for the salvation of mankind. They do not want a separation of church and state, moderates believe in living according to the Ten Commandments along with the teachings of Jesus Christ while radicals might go as far as crusading against non-Christians.

Circulus Theory

Wow, this one is shit [laugh track]

But to be serious, i'm pretty sure human fecal matter has loads of different types of bacteria in it.

Also, you can't just exponentially fertilise soil, so sadly that idea won't work.

Anyway, poop funny haha.

"Saving the economy, one dump at a time."

Circulus Theory, is a socialism-based economic system that wants to resolve the Malthusian Catastrophe by collecting human feces as taxes. According to Circulus Theory, human excrement has remarkable fertilising properties, which society fails to harness. The human waste that is otherwise discarded would fertilise agricultural production sufficient to cover society's progressively increasing food consumption. Circulus posits the existence of a natural law dependent on the circulation of human excrement back through the agricultural process and which maintains a necessary balance between soil fertility and inexorable population growth.

Civic Nationalism

In my opinion, this is the best type of nationalism. While it still isn't great since it can promote xenophobia based on nationality, it still is much less discriminatory than ethnic or religious nationalism.

"Hooray, we're citizens!"

Civic Nationalism is a type of nationalism that defines nationhood in terms of liberal values, such as liberty and equality, applied to all within the nation, which usually manifest itself in the country's constitution. Civic Nationalism believes the primary pillar of being a member of a country is citizenship above all ethnic and religious identifications.

Civil Libertarianism

Hell yeah!

Maybe lose the firearms legislation, but everything else about this is good.

Also, the profile art goes hard af.

"Article 1. Your right to swing your arms ends where another man's nose begins."

Civil Libertarianism who believes in the expansion and preservation of civil liberties. Distinct from right libertarianism because it is focused on fighting for a legal system centered around the harm principle, privacy and civil rights without any interest in economic liberalism.

Class Dealignment

This one isn't great, the entire point of political parties is so people get to choose how the country is run, including the economy.

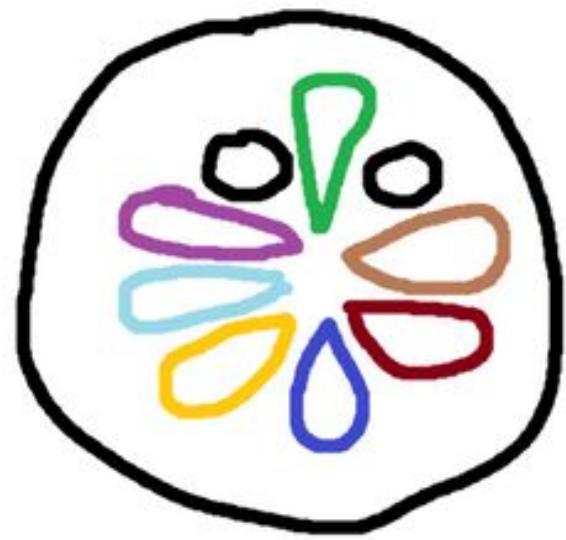

Cultural policies are very important, but economic policy is equally if not even more important.

Also, this isn't a good sign for any ideology.

Notable examples

Nazi Germany (1933-1945)

"I'm the only unbiased ideology."

Class Dealignment believes that measures should be taken to end the stratification of politics by class, as members of society will be biased due to their economic position - the rich tend to be capitalist and the poor tend to be socialist. Bias should be avoided where possible, so therefore parties should always take an economic middle ground, and differentiate themselves with cultural policy instead.

Classical Conservatism

Conservatism but even more regressive? No thanks.

Bonus points for elitism too.

"May tradition and reason prosper!"

Classical Conservatism is a type of conservatism that focuses on traditions stemming from before the Enlightenment.

Classical Liberalism

Despite the name of this one sounding left-wing, it's actually somewhat right-wing.

I can't support an ideology that believes in a "free market" and the anti-monopoly clause often doesn't work in practice.

Its social values are okay though.

"Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness."

Classical Liberalism is an ideology that was conceived some time in the early 18th century as a result of the Enlightenment. It believes that people had an inherent right to "Life, Liberty and The Pursuit of Happiness". Classical Liberalism hatched the idea, partly inspired by the French Physiocrats and their concept of laissez-faire, that individual freedom and a free market would result in a balanced economical equilibrium - as long as monopolies were not allowed to develop and destroy competitiveness.

Classical Social Democracy

Again, despite its name, this ideology is not very similar to modern social democracy.

I do agree with the reformist faction of it, but the marxist perspectives are a bit too extreme for me to comfortably support.

This is a 50/50 kinda ideology for me.

"This social transformation means the liberation, not only of the proletariat, but of the whole human race. Only the working-class, however, can bring it about."

Classical Social Democracy is a political movement that traces its roots to the Social Democratic Party of Germany. Its theories range from purely Marxist to reformist perspectives. Despite these differences, social democrats share three core beliefs. First, they see themselves as representatives of all non-capitalist classes. Second, they believe in the ultimate victory of socialism, regardless of the methods required to achieve it. And third, they advocate for the formation of an independent organization of the working class, capable of defending the rights of the proletariat and the whole working class.

Clerical Fascism

This one sucks for obvious reasons.

It is literally theocracy and fascism combined.

"For God and Fatherland! Down with degeneracy!"

Clerical Fascism is an ideology. Clerfash believes that a fascistic political system should be explicitly religious and serve the interests of the church as well as of the nation.

Climate Skepticism

Unironically one of the most dangerous ideologies right now.

I don't wanna even pretend there is a scientific case for climate denial, the science is settled.

CO₂ emitted by human activity traps heat in the atmosphere which raises temperatures, causing loads of stuff that can mess up earth's ecosystems.

"Who cares if some things are dying?! I don't wanna hear your crying!"

Climate Skepticism is an ideology that is opposed to Environmentalism and advocates maximum environmental damage. In most cases, it supports Industrialism. As a movement, climate skepticism seeks to discredit those with environmentally conscious claims, believing that they are over-exaggerated, entirely false, or just not a large concern.

Combatocracy

This is not a good idea.

Firstly, a brute force leader who has killed people for his job isn't exactly a good person to manage policies that don't have to do with war.

Even then, war is now mostly strategies these days, not who has the biggest muscles.

"A new leader is needed? To the Arena!"

Combatocracy is an ideology that advocates for a system of government in which leaders are chosen by trial by combat. It believes that only the strongest in society are fit to rule.

Communalism

Yeah this sucks. I'm not a fan of total private property, but this is much too far in the other direction.

A Communalist examines a recently collectivized toothbrush, Circa 2019

Communalism is an ideology that wants the complete collectivization of all property. This means that all that can be shared will be shared (toothbrushes, means of production, funkopops, magnets, houses, medieval torture devices, etc...).

Communitarianism

As long as it's not taken to cult compound levels of communitarianism, this one is fine.

I don't personally support it as people should consider individuals and not just broad demographics and communities.

"Unus pro omnibus, omnes pro uno"

Communitarianism is a political philosophy and ideology emphasizing the wellbeing of and the importance of the community as the primary social unit.

Communization Theory

I have no idea what that description really means but it sounds terrorist-like.

Also the quote is just a wall of text, no thanks, theme music is good tho.

"Communism is not an ideal to be realised: it already exists, not as alternative lifestyles, autonomous zones or counter-communities that would grow within this society and ultimately change it into another one, but as an effort, a task to prepare for. It is the movement which tries to abolish the conditions of life determined by wage-labour, and it will abolish them only by revolution."

Communization Theory is an Ultra-Left political movement which views the dictatorship of the proletariat to no longer be a sufficient transition to communism, instead proposing a process known as communization which is the destruction of Capitalist social relations and the replacement of them with communist ones.

Confederalism

Like the description says, not all people who believe in this ideology support the CSA.

Either way tho, having a system like that is basically just like having nations within a nation, which obviously can get chaotic very quickly.

"Wasn't it for states' rights, lincolnite?"

Confederalism is a system where a group of regional governments are united under a weak confederal government for some purpose but have equal or more power than the confederal government. In some versions, regional governments might even have in-country tariffs, local militias, and strong borders. Of course, not all Confederalists support the CSA.

Confessionalism

This is a terrible idea.

Firstly, the slightest demographic shift would make this system unbalanced.

Second, this is just inherently bigoted, image being not allowed to run for election since 'the atheist quota is full'

"25% of seats for Christians, 25% for Muslims, 25% for Jews and 25% for Atheists"

Confessionalism is an ideology that varies per country. Typically confessionalism means "representation of religion in politics". It typically entails distributing political and institutional power proportionally among religious communities.

Conservatism

This is the like the direct opposite to me on the political spectrum, so no thanks.

Much more tolerable than further right-wing ideologies.

"If it ain't broke, don't fix it."

Conservatism is a way of looking at social reality in an essentialist and teleological way, assuming the existence of an order and a natural law knowable by reason, revelation, or tradition. Conservatives emphasize duty, virtue, and human nature as well as seek to maintain the social order and their country's traditional values, they usually seek to preserve a range of institutions like religion with the aim of emphasizing social stability and continuity.

Conservative Feminism

Like the last one but slightly better since it's at least somewhat progressive.

Also, i have no idea what the song has to do with feminism or conservatives, but yeah.

"I want to speak to the manager."

Conservative Feminism is an ideology that seeks to strike a balance between upholding women's rights and maintaining a conservative lifestyle for women.

Conservative Liberalism

This is actually worse than normal conservatism.

The free market is a scam which is something i've said before although i haven't mentioned how free trade is often a terrible idea.

Free trade contributed to union jobs being moved from western nations to 'third-world' countries that either don't allow or have minimal unions and labour rights, meaning more profit.

Again, being socially conservatism sucks too, imagine being homophobic, they aren't that scary

"When bad men combine, the good must associate; else they will fall, one by one, an unpitied sacrifice in a contemptible struggle."

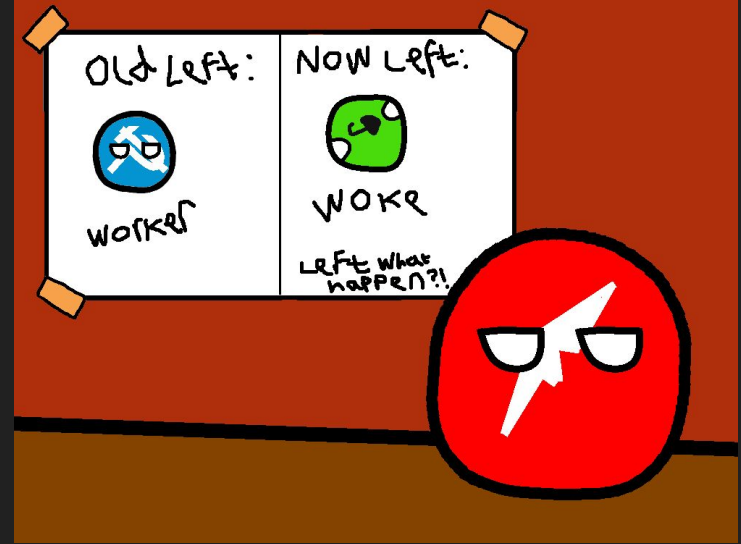

Conservative Liberalism is an ideology which seeks to combine liberal values such as free markets, free trade, individual rights and freedom of speech with a more traditional and conservative stance on social and ethical matters

Conservative Socialism

This sucks.

Socialism means both economic and social equality.

Being nostalgic for the soviet union isn't cool anymore, never was.

"The woke generation shall not poison the values of Socialism!"

Conservative Socialism is an ideology that supports a socialist economy where the means of production are either directly owned by the workers or by a worker's state, in combination with support for conservatism and traditional values. He believes a socialist society is the best way to maintain these values as capitalism breeds degeneracy and that social communitarianism cannot exist without economic collectivism.

Constitutional Monarchism

No thanks.

I'm a bit iffy about ceremonial monarchism, so giving that actual power is even worse.

"Let the parliament have a slice of a pie"

Constitutional Monarchism is in most aspects a moderate ideology. It believes that there should a monarch should rule, but should be restricted by formal constitutional means. Constitutional Monarchism is distinguished from Ceremonial Monarchism in that in a Constitutional Monarchy the monarch still holds power to enact policies, unlike in a Ceremonial Monarchy in which the only power the monarchy has is to act as figureheads.

Constitutionalism

I'm gonna assume this means just the general concept of a constitution as a founding document of a state.

The concept of a constitution isn't great. As we see in the US, a document cannot be fully comprehensive for future issues, which leaves the problem of figuring out 'original intent' to thousands of court cases who otherwise would have simple and logical answers.

For example, should anyone be able to take a quick background check and acquire a weapon capable of killing several people within seconds?

If you're sane, then no, they shouldn't be able to, at least not easily.

But the 'founding fathers' gave us the right to bear arms, so suck it up, liberal.

"Hi, I'm Saul Goodman. Did you know that you have rights? The constitution says you do! And so do I."

Constitutionalism is a non-quadrant ideology that can be defined either as the mechanism of state power limited by the constitution.

Contrarianism

One of the most annoying ideologies and types of people i've met in terms of politics.

At least you can have a somewhat meaningful debate with a nazi, this guy just says whatever pisses you off the most.

>Barges into any discussion and says "All of you are wrong."

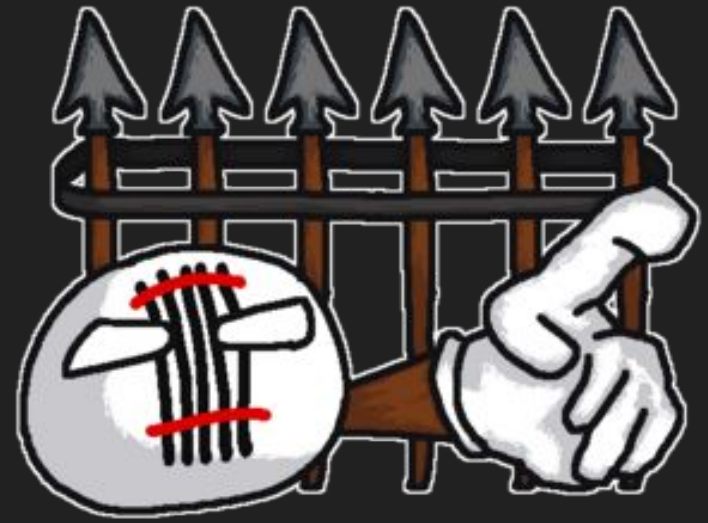

>Refuses to elaborate further and leaves

Contrarianism is an ideology whose only defining feature is opposing any currently prevailing political ideologies and their respective policies. Contrarianism does not have any distinct policies of its own, sometimes taking an opposite stance to the powers that be, but often providing no alternative at all, merely leveling criticism without offering any substitute.

Corporatism

Honestly, this just seems like state-controlled capitalism where people don't have even minimal control over their careers.

Also, this ideology's theme song isn't a good look tbh.

"Workers of the world, produce 40000 cars this month, and sell them for 1500 dollars."

Corporatism is an ideology that advocates for the organization of society into specialized employment sectors, such as agriculture, military, engineering and others, referred to as "corporations". Individuals are assigned to these corporations based on their interests and skills, and their employment is aligned with the goals set by the government, such as achieving a monthly production target of 40,000 cars. Corporatism promotes a cross-class system of regulation, where workers, employers, and the state engage in negotiations to efficiently manage the economy and ideally satisfy (in theory) all parties involved.

Corporatocracy

Obviously terrible idea.

I'm pretty sure this is the plot for like 200 different dystopian novels.

"LOBBYING, SUBSIDIES AND INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY!"

Corporatocracy is an economic system in which the state intervenes within the economy for the benefit of the profit of a select number for corporations, especially in the context of squashing competition.

Cosmicism

This literally “the world is all meaningless and the universe sucks” level of 3rd grade philosophy.

Stop watching Rick and Morty and go outside.

“The world sucks, deal with it”

Cosmicism is the belief that humanity is just a natural occurrence within the galaxy and nothing particularly special. It focuses on logic, atheism, and science above all and the respect for the unpredictability of nature. You are born, live, and die. Your fate is sealed and you must accept how it must be for you live upon a grain of sand within the ever expanding galaxy. Cosmicism is heavily against progressive and democratic ideals as it believes that such ideals bend what a society and what humanity naturally should be.

Council Communism

This one doesn't seem as bad as normal communism since power is at least spread between a council, but it's still far too centralised to prevent some kind of corrupt regime taking control.

"While there cannot be socialism without workers' control, neither can there be real workers' control without socialism."

Council Communism is a particular strain of left communism that emphasizes the role of worker's councils in organizing both the revolution itself and as a foundation of post-capitalist society. This direct proletarian control over production and distribution is seen by Council Communists as the true character of the dictatorship of the proletariat.

Counter-Enlightenment

Terrible ideology.

0/10 stars for obvious reasons.

"Theatra obscura operibus obscuris prosunt"

Counter-Enlightenment is the umbrella term that represents a general political view opposed to the ideas of the Enlightenment, viewing them as fundamentally misguided at best or plainly evil and degenerate at worst. Enlightenment ideas that are condemned include: Secularism, the notions of social progress, egalitarianism, the inherent rights of man as a secular concept, nationalism, popular sovereignty, Humanism, and Democracy

Crusade of Romanianism

- > Anti-Nazi
- > Hates Jews

Pick a side man for god's sake.

This one sucks obviously. It also seems anti-everything, which is confusing.

"PLĂCĂȚI DIN ȚARA MEA!"

Crusade of Romanianism is an ideology that is anti-capitalist, anti-communist, anti-Nazi, anti-Fascist and hates some Jews for 'economic reasons'.

Crusadism

Militant Religion is a terrible thing, no matter if it's christian, islamic, etc.

Also, i have a personal grudge against this one since online edgelords like to use knights templars as 'memes' against furies. It's painfully repetitive and unfunny.

"DEUS VULT!"

Crusadism is a form of militaristic Christianity that believes in the leadership of Holy Knights or Templars to uphold the beliefs of Christianity and to protect Christendom against all its foes. It was Christianity at the end of a Sword and military governance for all territory claimed by the Catholic Church.

Cultism

Cults are bad, it's basically religious totalitarianism taken to an even worse extreme.

The only cult i'm apart of is "More x for the x god!"

Cultism refers to the ideological tendency towards the practice of cults. Cults are usually defined as organizations that require unwavering devotion to a set of beliefs and practices which are considered deviant outside the norms of society. They often tend to exert an unhealthy and abusive amount of control over their members.

Cultural Nationalism

While this one is not as bad as ethnic nationalism, since they tend to be more moderate, it's still not great due to the problem with all types of nationalism.

That problem is the creation of an “us vs them” mentality with those outside the culture.

"Ah, I see you're a man of culture as well."

Cultural Nationalism is an ideology which views the nation as being a shared culture. It represents an intermediate position between civic nationalism and ethnic/racial nationalism. It is strongly opposed to multiculturalism, and usually only pro-immigration if the immigrants assimilate into their culture.

Cybercommunism

Honestly, this seems like a good idea. The only problem like with socialism is that a cyberattack would completely disable the planned economy.

It's still much better than other communist ideologies tho.

"Socialism is when the computers do stuff."

Cybercommunism is an ideology that calls for economic planning with computers. It believes that the usage of modern information technology and algorithms could solve the Economic Calculation Problem and allow planners create efficient and effective economic plans.

CyberFeminism

Robot feminists? Sure why not?

I support feminism, women's rights are cool.

The theme song is a bit bizarre tho.

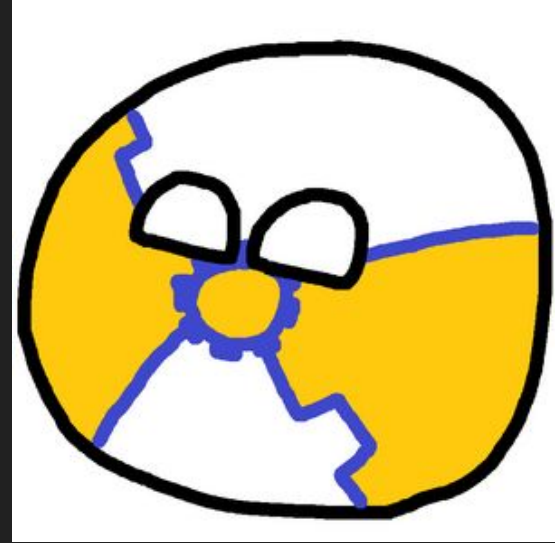

"We were whatever we were up to at the time. Free exchanges, microprocesses finely tuned, polymorphous transfers without regard for borders and boundaries. There was nothing to hang on to, nothing to be grasped, nothing to protect or be protected from. Insides and outsides did not count"

CyberFeminism is a philosophical and artistic movement which seeks to try and find the historical relationship between femininity and technology and to analyze it via Post-Structuralist and Postmodernist critique. CyberFeminism can broadly be said to be a part of the Postmodern Feminist and Post-Feminist tendencies of the Feminist Movement and with that it can also be said that it is part of the Third Wave of Feminism.

Cyberocracy

While this might be a good idea in the far future, AI currently isn't good enough to make truly unbiased and fair decisions on a national scale.

Also, i'm not a fan of current AI, it used way too much power in our current climate crisis.

"Robots are going to take politicians' jobs."

Cyberocracy is a non-quadrant ideology representing the advocacy of a government which is largely automated or partially automated and de-facto ruled by computers

De Francism

This one is just weird.

I like the anti-colonialism but the forbidding of 'elites' from marrying other 'elites' is just a bizarre restriction.

"El Supremo Dictador will create an utopia!!!"

De Francism is an ideology that believes in a utopian society based around the teachings in Rousseau's The Social Contract. It is selectively elitist, anti-colonialist, and anti-clericalism. This manifests in somewhat needlessly authoritarian decrees. For instance, it forbids the elite from marrying within their own class, so they were forced to marry common folk.

De Leonism

I'm not a fan of communism, it's much too extreme answer to capitalism's woes.

This is the same for this ideology too.

"Make no mistake: The organization of the working class must be both economic and political. The capitalist is organized upon both lines. You must attack him on both."

De Leonism is a form of unionist Marxism developed by Daniel De Leon. De Leon combined the rising theories of American unionism in his time with orthodox Marxism. According to De Leonist theory, industrial unions are the vehicle of class struggle. Industrial Unions serving the interests of the proletariat (working class) will bring about the change needed to establish a socialist system. These industrial unions will then form the basis for the dictatorship of the proletariat, and then with the establishment of communism, the basis for the association of producers.

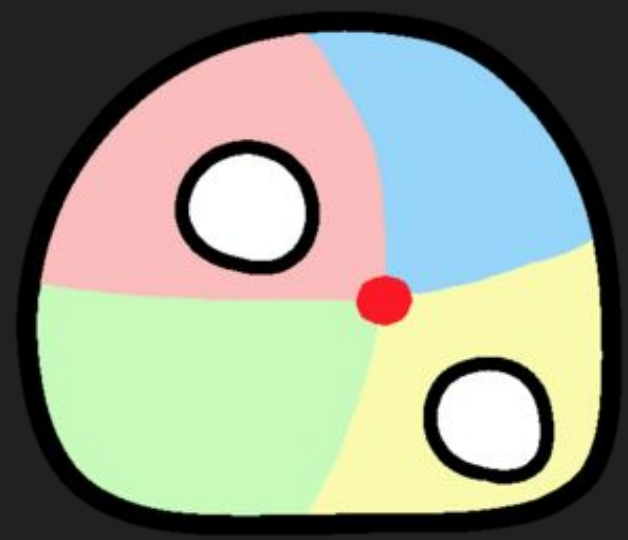

Dead Centrism

While conceptually less dangerous than extremes on the right or left, this ideology's 'compromise' solution isn't exactly great. I will explain why with this idea.

What would be a good compromise between a side that wants no one to die and a side that wants to kill thousands.

According to Dead Centrism, a good compromise would be to kill just a few hundred instead of thousands.

Dead Centrism, more like Dead... Dead!

"Half and half. That's good."

Dead Centrism is an ideology that believes the best solution to all problems is an exact compromise between two sides.

Death Worship

Yea, this one isn't great.

It's literally meant to be as dystopian as possible, so it's obvious why this is bad.

'당신의 죽음은 국가를 위한 불멸입니다.'

(Your death is immortality for your country)

Death Worship is an off-compass authoritarian ideology which is the doctrine of the super-state of Eastasia from 1984. Death Worship is the corruption of Asian Spirituality for the benefit of the state. Specifically the principle of Self-Sacrifice in the name of greater goals, which Death Worship transforms into self-abuse in the name of serving the state.

Deep Ecology

This is a good one mostly.
It's a little bit extreme, but i'm all for protecting the environment.
Also, that artwork is cool af.

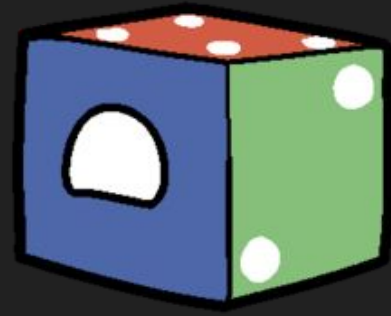

*"Find your place on the planet. Dig in,
and take responsibility from there."*

Deep Ecology is an environmentalist philosophy rooted in the belief that all forms of life have intrinsic value, emphasizing that human beings are just one part of the complex, interconnected web of the Earth's ecology. Advocates argue that all species, ecosystems, and natural processes should be treated with respect and considered equally essential to the planet's health, not merely as resources for human use. It often aligns with economically and culturally progressive stances, challenging traditional anthropocentric views and advocating for drastic environmental preservation measures. Deep Ecology calls for a radical restructuring of human relationships with nature, pushing for sustainability, biodiversity protection, and a fundamental shift away from consumption-driven societies toward an ecocentric worldview where the natural world is preserved for its own sake and not for any economic reasons

Demarchy

Yeah this sucks obviously.

Admittedly, it is fun tho.

"And the next president is..." rolls dice

Demarchy is a political system where leaders are chosen at random from a pool of candidates.

Democracy

While democracy isn't perfect, it is the best system we have.

Also, elections are fun to watch.

"By the people, of the people, for the people."

Democracy believes that the people residing within a state all have the right to decide rules, policies, leaders, etc. based off what most people want.

Democratic Confederalism

At its core beliefs, i agree with a lot of what this is.

Although, it does concern me that it is an ideology born during a civil war, and it's song's music video feels like an ISIS propaganda video.

I do sympathise with those being forced to defend their beliefs in the face of brutal conflict, but the whole “shooty death bang bang” aesthetic is kinda driving me away.

Sorry Kurds, i'll check back in 10 years.

Bijî Kurdistan, Bijî Serok Apo!

(Long live Kurdistan, Long live President Apo!)

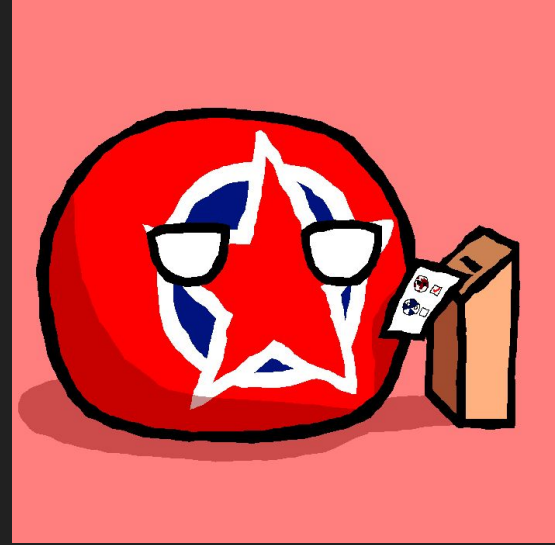

Democratic Confederalism is a system developed by Kurdish politician Abdullah Öcalan. It is currently practiced in Rojava, a de facto autonomous region in northern Syria. The ideology advocates for a network of administrative councils, elected by the people, that enable local communities to exercise autonomous control over their resources while remaining connected through confederal councils. It replaces private property with "property of use," allowing individuals to utilize infrastructure and land without converting it into private enterprises. Democratic Confederalism emphasizes principles such as Direct Democracy, Environmentalism, Third-World Feminism, Multiculturalism, and voluntary self-defense. A key aspect of the ideology is its critique of Nationalism and nation-states. It aims to establish a "Democratic Nation" that is decentralized, multicultural, and opposed to capitalist profit accumulation, effectively dismantling traditional conceptions of nationhood.

Democratic Socialism

One of my two main ideologies.

Cool as hell, power to the people.

~~Corbyn please return my emails, i love you~~

"There is only one hope for mankind - and that is democratic Socialism."

Democratic Socialism is a left-wing ideology inhabiting around the top center of the libertarian left quadrant. Democratic Socialism seeks to combine Democracy and Socialism. This is done typically by means of advocating for transition to socialism by Reformist and electoralist means, using Liberal democracy to achieve a socialist society, rather than using revolutionary, or otherwise violent or non-reformist means.

Dengism

I'd make a commie joke here, but china isn't even communist these days.

They're like a bizarre mix of capitalist and state capitalist.

The only thing that can be said for sure, is that it is truly shit.

China will become a modern socialist country by 2050, trust me.

Dengism is an authoritarian, culturally right-leaning ideology with nationalistic tendencies. Dengism saw that for China to adjust to its present economic conditions, capitalism, with party influence and foreign investment, would have to be implemented to increase productivity. This theoretically lifts China out from its primary stage of capitalism into socialism.

Diarchy

While having two kings is technically more free than having one king, it's not by much.

It's still monarchism that should be left to the past and fairy tales.

"Ignore my idiot half!"

Diarchy believes in a system where two people, either lawfully or de facto, share the same title.

Diggerism

Anarchism sucks, like i said before, injecting extreme religion into just makes it even worse.

"Stand up now!"

p.s: by 'extreme religion', i mean any religion that is practiced to a dogmatic and cult-like level of obedience.

Diggerism is similar to Anarcho-Communism, but much more agrarian, as it existed in a pre-capitalist, pre-industrial society. It advocates a society made up of agrarian, egalitarian communes based upon the idea of "common land". It is a deeply religious Protestant.

Distributism

While i am a fan of small businesses, this whole 'limited government thing while also being a fan of antitrust legislation' thing is pretty contradictory.

"More small business owners!"

Distributism can be defined by four major tenets:

Widespread ownership of property: Workers should be owners and businesses should be comprised of worker co-operatives, family businesses, or ESOP-based traditional businesses whenever possible and that people should own both their own personal private property as well as maintain some kind of ownership of private productive property whenever possible.

Anti-Trust Legislation: Large businesses must be broken up into smaller, more local businesses whenever possible.

The Principle of the Subsidiarity: The government should never intervene in cases where a lower level of government would be able to fix the issue. In short, if problem cannot be solved by level 1, it goes to be solved by level 2 and so on.

The Indivisible Unit: The smallest social unit is the family, not the individual as in capitalism and socialism. This means that laws must be considered with the full thought of the familial consequences as well as that laws must provide for family units rather than individuals because distributism recognizes that an individual is a part of the larger collective of his family and that what happens to him affects the family.

E-Democracy

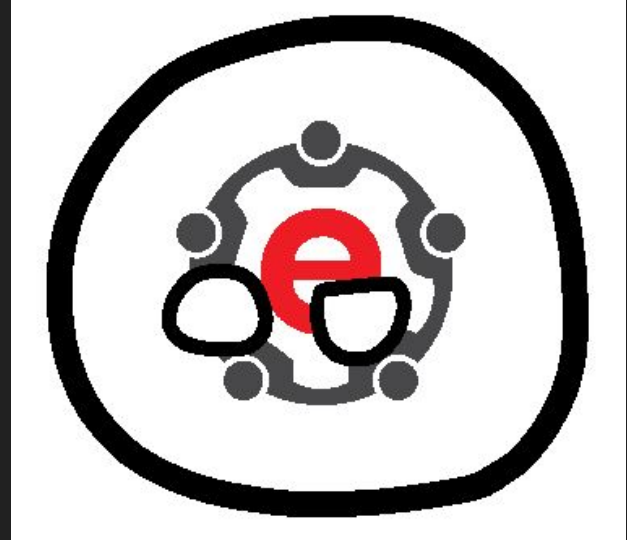

In an ideal world, this would be great. Loads of people who would usually be too busy with work to vote would be able to with just an app/website.

Sadly, we live in the age of cyberattacks, technical failures and plain old fashioned malware.

An online voting system for something important, for example: a presidential election, would be a massive target for basically every enemy of the electing nation.

While cyberattacks and hacking are much harder nowadays, the aren't unfeasible to pull off, especially when you don't need to attack a single secure target. You could compromise the system by changing the internal voting tallies on a single server.

I think E-Democracy will have it's time to shine in a hopefully much more peaceful future, but not today sadly.

"The wi-fi's down... cancel the election!"

E-Democracy is an ideology that advocates for a system of government meant to increase citizen participation through the use of the internet (such as voting online)

Eco-Anarchism

This is half-good.

Environmentalism is great but i don't think reverting to anarchist communes is required for the world to become renewable.

Also, this ideology actually has a faction in the UK's Green Party, so that's fun.

"Mother nature loves her sons!"

Eco-Anarchism is an ideology that advocates for humanity to be much closer to nature than it is right now while living within a network of communes.

Eco-Authoritarianism

I'm not a fan of this in principal, but i'm convinced that if we do end up fixing climate change in time, it will be at least partly thanks to this ideology coming to power.

Basically, Good goals, bad methods.

"The clean govern, the filth dies."

Eco-Authoritarianism is the belief that Global Warming is the problem of utmost importance and a powerful state is needed to solve such a problem. This state advocated usually for vanguardist and technocratic in nature.

Eco-Capitalism

While this does seem live a plausible premise for why capitalism can stop climate change, this doesn't factor in the fact that companies can just lie.

And they do lie, a lot.

"Buy our coke bottle NOT made from Seal's Teeth, recycle said bottle, buy another, make a circle and there you the market has saved the climate!"

Eco-Capitalism believes that the market desire for more eco-friendly products combined with more resource-efficient products being more profitable, charity and the owners of property not wanting their property polluted would naturally limit the amount of pollution of the earth's environment.

Eco-Conservatism

If conservatives were not just focused on bullying gay people and taking bribes from BP, i feel like they'd mostly agree with this.

You wanna conserve national heritage? Help us conserve our national forests.

Sadly, the world is complicated and often sad.

*"I don't get called
"Conservationism" for nothin'!"*

Eco-Conservatism believes that the preservation of natural habitat and the preservation of the cultural heritage of a nation are complimentary notions as they both involve conserving the elements of the past.

Eco-Fascism

Yeah no, that's way too far.

I was a bit iffy about eco-authoritarianism but i'm flat out against this one.

Green or not, still a fascist, become compost please.

[Also, bonus points for the anti-semitic dog whistle in the caption)

"End the gas (((polluters)))!"

Eco-fascists adhere to the deep ecological principle of humanity being interconnected with nature, with a distinct focus on the synergy between a human population and its ancestral land. Eco-fascism opposes the globalist, liberal and progressive attitudes of modern ecological movements, preferring insular, traditional and agrarian societies. Due to the prevalence of European paganism and blood and soil doctrine among eco-fascists.

Eco-Nationalism

While i do not agree with most forms of nationalism, i think this ideology uses it for good, not bigotry or hate.

So yeah, this one is pretty good.

Keep Stanistan green!

Ecological Nationalism is a political ideology which synthesis nationalist ideal of national duty with environmentalist concerns for protecting the natural habitat.

Eco-Socialism

I do agree with this mostly, but the whole 'revolution' thing isn't great since most revolutions just result in horrible dictatorships.

Although, i think climate change could get bad enough that revolution might be a reasonable option to deliver urgent change.

"Compost the rich!"

Eco-Socialism believes that the reduction of CO2 emissions and socialist-style economics are complementary, as pollution is the result of mainly Capitalist commodity production. It believes that Capitalism will destroy the planet and that we need to have a revolution. it also believes in extreme environmentalism.

Ecofeminism

While i am not really into all the philosophic mother earth stuff but sure, women can help with the environment.

Humanity is a team effort, and you don't wanna remove half of your team.

"We're all tied to mother earth"

Ecofeminism is a feminist ideology which believes that ecology doesn't place men in the dominant position but rather calls for a collaborative, equal society. It explores connections between women and nature. While not inherently on the left, Promoters of ecofeminism criticizes Capitalism for its patriarchal values and believes it does not benefit women.

Ego-Communism

The description of this doesn't really explain much, but like i said before, Egoism is a selfish ideology and communism is way too extreme of an answer to capitalism's flaws.

"The Bourgeoisie are spooks."

Ego-Communism seeks to fulfill his egoistic interest by abolishing Capitalism.

Elective Monarchism

While this is better than other forms on monarchy, it isn't great since the monarch still has absolute power during their rule.

Minor improvement, but do better.

"Vote for your future majesty!"

Elective Monarchism was created as an alternative to lineage based monarchies who had a tendency to result in succession crisis after a few generations. The voting powers are usually only held by high ranking nobles and influential clergy members. It believes that the state should be based around a monarch that instead of being hereditary, should be elected. Usually the monarchical candidates would be elected by a specific pool of nobles.

Enlightened Absolutism

This is slightly better than pre-enlightenment monarchy. Still isn't anywhere near good though.

"Everything for the people, nothing by the people!"

Enlightened Absolutism is an ideology that believes the philosophical values of the Enlightenment Thought should be enforced through an Absolute Monarchy.

Enlightenment Thought

This was probably one of the most important cultural events in western history.

While it was not all good, i wouldn't risk changing anything about the Enlightenment.

"Eureka!"

The Enlightenment was born sometime in the late 17th century and is the ancestor of many, many ideologies. It is a broad ideology used to represent ideas of the Age of Enlightenment. Although its biggest contribution to the world was to give birth to Republicanism and Classical Liberalism, it also caused the separation of church and state and went against tyranny. Its ideas promoted individual liberty, progress, fraternity, and tolerance.

Environmentalism

It's a bit broad but hell yeah.
In the current climate, protecting and restoring nature should be the number one objective of a government.

Make progress, but don't hurt the world with your pace.

"Please save the whales by not smoking cigarettes anymore or I'll call 911 on you!"

Environmentalism is a non-quadrant ideology used to represent a range of ideologies which fall under the belief that nature should be a significant factor in deciding public policy, be it increasing recycling, decreasing CO2 emissions, or stopping water pollution.

Ergatocracy

While i would not say that the average joe is capable of being prime minister, the education and abilities to create policy and manage budgets are not too far away from them.

I guess i somewhat believe this.

[No Quote]

Ergatocracy is an ideology where the working class, workers, or the proletariat are capable of ruling a society. Most of its examples have held generally progressive leanings.

Esoteric Fascism

Literally asylum patient ideology.

Also, this was the ideology of Hitler's second in command, Himmler, so that's not at all concerning.

"UNTER DER SCHWARZEN SONNE GIBT ES KEINE HOFFNUNG"

Esoteric Fascism is an ideology rooted in Fascism but distinguished by its mystical interpretation of Nazism. It tends to merge elements of Paganism, Gnosticism, Hinduism, Buddhism and Satanism to create a belief system that often views the Aryan race as divine or extraterrestrial in origin. Adolf Hitler is often perceived as a reincarnation of a god or messianic figure, such as Kalki, destined to purify the world. This ideology also often entertains pseudoscientific ideas about "Nazi super science", such as the Reichsflugscheiben, or Nazi flying saucers, believed to be developed through occult knowledge. Esoteric Fascism combines hyper-authoritarianism with a mythologized history, positioning Aryans as a divine lineage with Hitler as their ultimate prophetic leader.

Esoteric Socialism

This one sucks, both the ideology itself and the general insanity of the theory surrounding it.

Why would you create a fake secret government to hate when you can just hate the normal government?

"We rule the world from the shadows, my friend..."

Esoteric Socialism is an ideology that claims to secretly control the world through groups of powerful Freemasons and lobbyists. It is essentially a version of popular conspiracy theories connecting communism to the Freemasons and the occult, but entirely unironically. It has a secret plan to create chaos in the world in order to bring the Antichrist back, or something.

Ethnocacerism

Basically Latin American nazis.

Also, expect a few more blatantly racist ideologies since we have gotten to the Ethno prefix on the list, lovely.

"ALLIN PACHAQ"

Ethnocacerismo is an ideology in Peru founded by Isaac Humala in the year 2000. It is based on a radical Indigenism that poses an authoritarian government led by indigenous people, and also places a lot of emphasis on the racial supremacy of the indigenous peoples and a strong militarism. It's economic stances are far left, he also holds extreme ethno-nationalist and ethno-supremacist social and racial opinions.

Ethnocracy

Haha, fuck off

"Everyone else is inferior except for me."

Ethnocracy is a government form that believes one ethnicity or race is superior to all others, and that superior race/ethnicity should concentrate political power and subjugate others.

Ethnonationalism

You can fuck off too

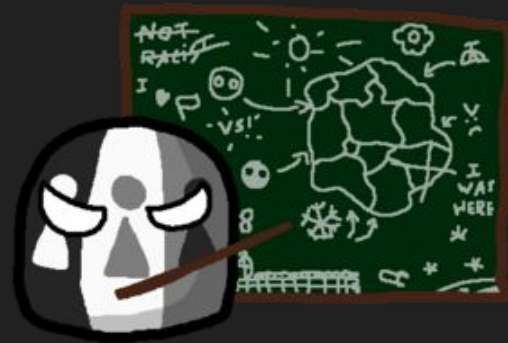

"We must secure the existence of our people and a future for Stanistan!"

Ethnonationalism is the counterpart ideology to Civic Nationalism. Instead of believing that nationality is based on common shared institutions and values, it believes that it's shared by common ethnicity and views it as the primary pillar of citizenship.

Ethnopluralism

And finally, you fuck off too.

"You gotta keep 'em separated."

Ethnopluralism is a non-quadrant culturally-right ideology. It advocates for cultural diversity at a global level, but ethnic assimilation and separatism in a national level so the citizens of such nations are ethnically homogeneous, but each nation is ethnically different. He respects separate and bordered ethnic regions, and he wants to preserve them.

The corner of racist shame >>>

Eugenicism

While in concept this does seem like a good idea, this very quickly devolves into racist pseudoscience, which is why Eugenics in itself is also a pseudoscience.

Here's a good quote to explain it better than I can.

“In fact, the abysmal history of murder and sterilisation undertaken in the name of race hygiene and the “improvement” of the human species again and again in this century is so overpowering that the risk of recurrence, sliding down what has proved time and time again to be an extremely slick, slippery slope, does seem enough to bring all ethical argument in favour of eugenics to an end” - Arthur L Caplan, National Institute Of Health.

"Hey, you! Get outta the gene pool!"

Eugenicism is a political ideology which seeks to shape public policy in accordance with the field of eugenics. Eugenics is a now discredited field of science which claims to be the 'study of good genes'. Eugenics takes influence from the Darwinian theory of evolution, which states that organisms develop to better suit a given environment through the gradual dying of organisms that are unsuited to the environment before they can reproduce and applies them to Humans; this is done by selecting traits which are 'desirable' and artificially adjusting the environment to either maximize the reproduction of those with those traits or minimizing the reproduction of those with undesirable traits

Eurocommunism

It's a bit too extreme, i'm more of a democratic socialist than a full-on communist, but it's okay.

Also, a united europe is my ultimate geo-political goal if i ever get any kind of power, so this one gets a B-

Workers of Europe, through struggle you will attain your rights!

Eurocommunism is a revisionist ideology in the 1970s and 1980s within various Western European communist parties that support the idea of European Union nation under a communist government.

European Federalism

OH FUCK YEAHHHHHHHH A+ A+ A+ A+

Seriously, think about it. Individual european nations are too weak to stand on their own, there is a reason that NATO has a reputation of just being the US fan club.

But a united EU would be the 3rd most populous nation in the world and the second largest economy in the world. We can do this babyyyyy!!

~~Starmer please rejoin i'm fucking begging you~~

"In varietate concordia"

("United in diversity")

European Federalism is a Pan-Nationalist ideology focused on creation of a federal and democratic superstate.

Euskadi Carlism

This one is better than the other version of Carlism, but still isn't great.

Monarchism is basically just inherited dictatorship and 'Christian Values' often run contrary to this ideologies.

"I'm going to kill more economic liberals!"

Euskadi Carlism is a variation of Carlism that combines traditionally monarchist ideas like having a king and Christian values with traditionally socialist ones like wealth equality. It's culturally variable, although often progressive, civically centrist, and economically left.

Existentialist Anarchism

While i'm not a fan of anarchism, which i made clear much earlier, existentialism is a great philosophy.

Humans are not born with a pre-determined fate.

"And those who were seen dancing were deemed insane by they who were deaf to the music."

Existentialist Anarchism is an ideology that believes a truly Individualist society is only possible through the realization of existentialist philosophy.

Existentialism can be summarised as "Being human is an existence that is condemned to be free. It is because a human who has nothing predetermined must make their own life by making independent choice every moment"

Fabian Socialism

Yeah no thanks, i already said why eugenics suck.

Also how dare they not just stain the name of Socialism, but also goats by having one on their crest.

"Money and credit are as much human contrivances as bicycles, and as liable to expansion and modification as any other sort of prevalent but imperfect machine."

Fabian Socialism is an ideology which refers to the ideology of the Fabian Society, specifically the policies it advocated during the early 1900s which sought to reduce poverty through the use of eugenics.

Falangism

Another fascist, please pull an elvis and leave the building.

¡Arriba España!

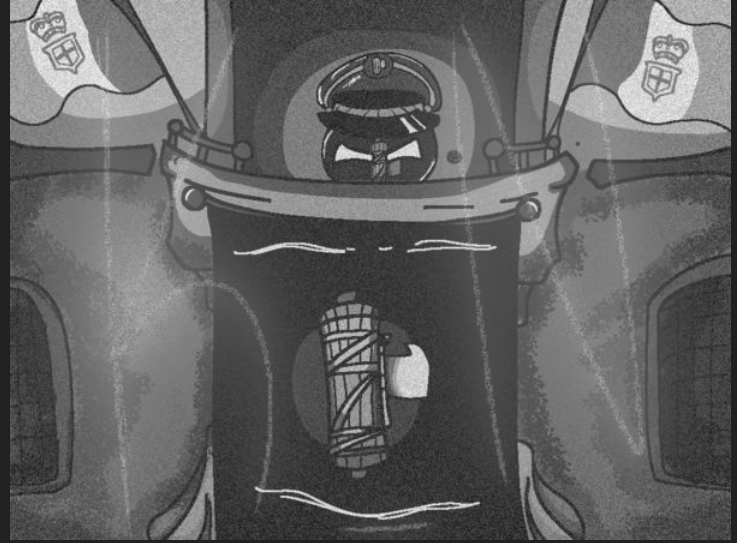

Falangism is an ideology originating from Spain. It places a large emphasis on hierarchy, authority and order, and is opposed to communism and liberal democracy. Falangism believe in uniting all of Spain using violence, thus it heavily opposes regional Separatist movements. It believes in a form of pan-Hispanic nationalism known as Hispanidad. It also believes in strict adherence to traditional gender roles.

Fascism

Despite their defeat almost 80 years ago, fascism is once again rearing its ugly head on the world stage.

Therefore, i think i should make it 100% clear like i did with the Alt-Right at the start of this.

think it's more important than ever to stress that it is not "Intolerant" to not tolerate intolerance, It's not "censorship" to tell nazis to fuck off and most importantly, those who speak with anger and hate should be ignored and paid no heed, as chances are they simply crave power, not prosperity for all.

"Everything within the state, nothing outside the state, nothing against the state."

Fascism is an ideology that originates from the teachings of the Italian dictator Benito Mussolini and philosopher Giovanni Gentile, originally outlined in The Doctrine of Fascism. Fascism has had many different iterations throughout history, some of which were inspired by or have built upon Mussolini's and Gentile's ideas, while the form of fascism that follows the original doctrine is called Italian Fascism or Classical Fascism.

Federalism

This one is okay, but i think it can be a bit ridiculous when taken to the extreme like in America, with separate state governments, county governments and city governments.

Preferably a UK-Style system with a national assembly, country assembly and town council. In descending order of power would be better.

"Multiple governments in one"

Federalism is a non-quadrant system that combines multiple regional governments into one central or "federal" government. The main characteristic is the equivalence between the two or more levels of government.

Feminism

I support every wave of feminism. It's true that throughout history, women have been consistently oppressed.

In the US women couldn't even open a bank account until 1975 without a husband's AND father's permission.

And that's not to mention the fact that women couldn't even vote in the US until 1920.

Also, even today societal attitudes towards women often prevent them from getting a job normally seen as 'man's work'.

Finally, women were only allowed to drive cars in Saudi Arabia as recently as 2018.

"We can do it!"

Feminism is an ideology who focuses on women's emancipation and women's issues. The majority of feminist movements tend to promote ideas through a female perspective. While the many factions of feminism vary greatly they are genuinely unified by this common belief.

Feudalism

This system would never work today.

I'm not surprised, it barely worked during its prime.

"In democracy it's your vote that counts; In feudalism it's your count that votes"

Feudalism is an ideology practiced throughout Europe from as early as the sixth century BCE to as late as technically 2008 although its prime was from the 9th century when the middle ages properly kicked off to the 19th century when The Enlightenment Thought had properly started to create an entirely new status quo. Feudalism used to be based on holding all land in fief or fee and the resulting relation of lord to vassal. It was characterized by homage, legal and military service of tenants, and forfeiture. Lords provided some of their lands to vassals, or tenants, in exchange for their support to the Lord. Vassals generally were required to serve guard duty, and, later, they paid a fee to acquire mercenaries (soldiers-for-hire). In exchange for protection, land to work, and a place to live, peasants provided the Lord with labor or a share of the produce or livestock yielded from his lands.

Feuillantism

To be honest, if France became a constitutional monarchy instead of a full-on republic, then France might have been a bit more stable than in our timeline.

However, the best monarchy is no monarchy.

Why can't French republicans and monarchists just get along?

Feuillantism is an ideology, representing the feuillant political faction which existed in France from 1791-1792. They wanted to preserve the monarchy, supported the proposed plan for a constitutional monarchy, and opposed the Jacobins, who wanted to depose the monarchy.

Financialism

Capitalism is bad, but this is like 10x worse.

Wall Street can't even run itself half the time, how can it run the country?

"Money..."

Financialism is a form of government where banks and other financial institutions have political power to rule.

Fiscal Conservatism

While it is good for a country to not just print or borrow loads of money, Fiscal Conservatism also has a catch.

Most Fiscal Conservatives prefer to cut spending rather than raise taxes, which since they are conservative, often means cuts to welfare, which isn't great.

"Look at all this debt..."

Fiscal Conservatism is an ideology that believes finances of the public body should be responsible and sustainable in the long term.

Fordism

Guys help, i think ingsoc have overdosed again.

Obviously, this one sucks. While at a purely pragmatic point of view, this ideology produces a lot of 'happiness', it's all superficial hedonism.

I'm not against indulging in decadent stuff, but c'mon man, kick the habit.

"CONSOOMA."

Fordism describes a society in which a state keeps control by supplying the people with an endless supply of drugs, Entertainment and Sex. All things that might require any sort of duty that goes against how the Fordists keep control is completely eliminated by the global state social engineering by instilling a hatred to these things to children since an early age and raising them in facilities. The ideology is intended to create a society that does not experience any kind of sorrow or hardship but seems to be mainly focused on increasing consumption.

Fourth Theory

No thanks, too much abstract philosophy. Also, pro-russian L

"A new political theory, united against liberalism!"

Fourth Theory is an ideology that claims to go beyond the 3 modern political theories, Liberalism, Communism and Fascism. According to Fourth Theory, Liberalism has successfully defeated their 2 major political opponents (Marxism–Leninism and Fascism), and are currently destroying politics as a whole. Fourth Theory rejects the ideas that the main subject of politics is one of individualism, class or nation but one of Dasein, a concept of Heideggerian philosophy that roughly refers to the experience of being unique to humans. The Fourth Theory also wants and calls for a return to traditionalism and theology, because it seeks to return to a set of values that oppose those of the current liberal modernity.

Francoism

While the description doesn't provide much information about the ideology, i'm gonna assume it's not great due to these tags on its page.

Influenced by:

-  Absolute Monarchy (Long-Term Goal)
-  Anti-Communism
-  Anti-Democracy
-  Anti-Feminism
-  Anti-LGBT+
-  Anti-Liberalism

«¡España es una, grande y libre!»

Francoism is an ideology that is based upon the ideals and political beliefs of the Spanish dictator Francisco Franco, who ruled from the end of the Spanish Civil War in 1939 until his death in 1975.

Frankfurt School

While this one's description is mostly just babbling, i'm gonna assume it's a variant of communism.

So again, communism is far too authoritarian, support democratic socialism instead.

[No Quote]

The Frankfurt school perspective is based upon Marxist, Freudian and Hegelian premises of Idealism. To fill the omissions of 19th-century classical Marxism, which did not address 20th-century social problems, they applied the methods of antipositivist sociology, of psychoanalysis, and of existentialism.

French Fascism

Again, fascism sucks no matter the national variant.
That's it basically.

"Travail, Famille, Patrie"

French Fascism is an ideology that uses the ideas of fascism with French characteristics. French Fascism is usually anti-Semitic, anti-capitalist, and anti-communist.

Fully Automated Gay Space
Communism
I know this is mostly a joke ideology but if we don't manage to kill ourselves with nukes, bio-weapons, climate change, etc, Then i'm pretty sure this will be the status quo is a few millennia, which is good.

"I require SPACE ROBOT DICK!"

Fully Automated Luxury Gay Space Communism is an ideology focused on achieving a world in which automation has created a post-scarcity communist society where homosexuality is considered normal and space travel is commonplace. It is essentially Socialist Transhumanism but with the added element of LGBTQ rights being a primary goal.

Futurism

This one sounded okay until it mentioned violence, so yeah no thanks.

Become less violent and then return please.

"WE'VE GONE TO PLAID!"

Futurism was an originally Italian artistic philosophical movement based on a Ultra-Modernist spirit based on beauty an action. It believes beauty is found in the new, speed and dynamic culture; said culture is achieved in rebellion and action against the past, and following that logic all Futurists sought to understand the means to find that beauty. Futurism thus believes in revolutionary thought promoting beauty, violence, the abolition of past traditions, hyper-industrialism, and the whole of human passion and emotion. It rejects any form of utilitarianism, moralism or conservatism; choosing instead to lean on individualism and similar conclusions.

Gaddafism

Okay, i'm gonna say something a bit weird.

This ideology is like... 25% good. The religious law sucks and the variant of socialism is pseudo-democratic, but the support for direct democracy is great.

Also, Gaddafi was a nutcase.

"There is no state with a democracy except Libya on the whole planet."

Gaddafism is a term used to describe the ideology and ideas of Muammar Gaddafi, who, in a military coup of the Libyan monarchy, became the de facto ruler of Libya from 1969 to 2011.

Gandhian Socialism

While this would be great in an ideal world, strict pacifism just ties someone to not respond when attacked.

I think a middle-road between an eye for an eye and strict pacifism is ideal, with responses being dealt out with less intensity than the offense, if the response is equal to the offense, it will just encourage escalation or continuation of hostilities.

It may sound bizarre, but playing some form of slow armed detente with an enemy could prevent a lot of suffering.

"Non-violence is the first article of my faith."

Gandhian Socialism is a form of Socialism based on the ideas of Mahatma Gandhi. Gandhian Socialism preaches that economics that harm a nation or the people within it are immoral and thus, should not be practiced. It favors a highly egalitarian society in which economic classes do not exist and each person gets a fair share of their labor.

Gaullism

Despite being one of the main allied leaders in WW2, De Gaulle was not a great man.

For example, when he got pissed that his troops were stopped from killing more syrian protesters.

“Against great perils salvation can only be found in grandeur”

The ideology Gaullism refers to an ensemble of beliefs attributed to the 5th republic founder and iconic French historical figure General Charles De Gaulle.

Geo-Anarchism

No idea what land value capture means but anarchy sucks, sorry.

"True and equal liberty for all!"

Geo-Anarchism is an ideology that advocates for a stateless society that recognizes of the immorality of land value capture.

Geolibertarianism

I might be thick, but this just seems like a bunch of economic babble that means nothing.

"Landlords Violate the NAP"

Geolibertarianism is an ideology that believes in an untampered free market with a singular land-value tax. Geolibertarians state that all land property and raw natural resources; assets that qualify as land by an economic definition are scarce and rivalrous goods considered as common property. It still takes a lot from georgism, however, supports many forms of Pigouvian taxes, severance taxes, and compensatory fees.

Georgism

This one isn't great. It's extremely unrealistic to fund an entire nation based off of a single tax, even if you include a pollution tax.

"See the cat?"

Georgism seeks to achieve justice, prosperity, and progress through a fair distribution of economic rent and the annihilation of deadweight loss from inefficient taxes and harmful monopolies. It believes that there should only be one tax, being the land value tax. He views property rights as only extending to the properties of labor and capital, and since land is neither, it's free real estate. Though its main bit is only having one tax, it also generally supports free markets and free trade, and he sometimes promotes a citizen's dividend and pollution taxes.

Geosyndicalism

This one is slightly better, since it allows for other taxes, not just a land value tax only. Although, it still suffers from the free market™

How could a worker-led company compete against a company that while it does exploit its workers with dirt poor wages, makes more profit as a result?

"The right way to do property!"

Geosyndicalism is an ideology that believes in both worker ownership and a land value tax. It wants a worker self-managed form of Socialism, but still with a mostly free market. Like Mutualism, It believes the market should primarily reward productive work, but it isn't completely opposed to statist property relations.

Gerontocracy

This one sucks and is the reason we need term limits for all politicians.

Having a nation ran disproportionately by the elderly results in extremely backwards social policy and a heavy reluctance to adapt economic policy.

"Kids these days..."

Gerontocracy is a form of oligarchical rule in which an entity is ruled by leaders who are significantly older than most of the adult population. The ancient Greeks were among the first to believe in this idea of gerontocracies; as famously stated by Plato "it is for the elder man to rule and for the younger to submit". However, these beliefs are not unique to ancient Greece, as many cultures still subscribe to this way of thinking. This belief has been very common in tribal communities as the lack of writing meant that people relied on older people to seek knowledge much more frequently.

Gift Economy

Merry late christmas btw.

Anyway, it's sad this system wouldn't work in real life on anytime but christmas.

Maybe in some future post-scarcity utopia it will work, idk.

"It's about giving, not getting."

In a Gift Economy, instead of a person making an exchange or request with someone for something, it's entirely up to the person with the "gift" on when and who it is given to. A "gift" means something that is given away for free to someone else (or multiple people) with no explicit exchange. The item is only given away through good will, aka the Spirit of Giving. Nothing is expected in return for the gift. The action of gift giving creates a mutual trust and respect between the people and furthers a successful community. There is no feeling of being wronged in an exchange because there are no direct contractual exchanges in the first place. Collaborative works/projects are done to provide a vast number of people with a type of gift.

Girondism

Despite the slightly stabby cover image, this one is good. Before it became about 'purging counter-revolutionaries', the french revolution as one of the best political events in human history.

"Vive la République! Vive l'Assemblée Nationale!"

("Long live the Republic! Long live the National Assembly!")

Girondism is an ideology that's against the French monarchy and supported the French Revolution, but only during its earlier stages. Additionally, Girondism believes that democracy should be reformed and that secularism is the way to go. It opposes populism and authoritarianism.

Globalism

While globalism has its bad aspects, like the undermining of local businesses, slave labour in developing countries in order to meet market demand, etc. I think Globalism can be toned down in such a way to be truly beneficial, such as Alt-Globalism.

"I'm gonna turn the flipping frogs gay"

Globalism is an ideology that believes in diplomacy, compromise/cooperation, integration, and in its most extreme forms, an international world government.

Green Liberalism

This one is okay but in practice, it does basically nothing for the environment due to fears of disturbing the 'free market'

"Green Graß and Freedom!"

Green Liberalism is an ideology that advocates for tight regulations on matters that impact the environment while remaining liberal on other social issues and economic issues.

Green Libertarianism

Same as Green Liberalism, but even more so.

Don't tread on the flowers.

Green Libertarianism thinks that the state should be reduced to have its main occupation be taking care of the environment. Simply, Libertarianism but more focusing on ecological meanings. It could be seen as a form of minarchy in which the states only purpose is to handle environmental issues

Green Syndicalism

This one is a bit better than the other two green ideologies in this trio since it is likely to actually get stuff done.

However, syndicalism is far too extreme of a stance to take on labour rights. Unions are great, but like any organization, give them too much power and they become corrupt.

Defend Mother Earth!

Green Syndicalism is an ideology who exists as a synthesis between environmentalism and revolutionary syndicalism and believes in a decentralized economy established through strikes, direct action and the creation of syndicates (local revolutionary worker organizations and unions), additionally arguing that environmental protection largely depends on decentralization, direct action, regionalism, autonomy and federation, in addition to the creation of a syndicalist economic system. GreenSynd's ideology is highly influenced by both the social anarchist and eco-socialist movements.

Guevarism

Any ideology that bases itself off of a military strategy will never win my approval.

Although it is disputed that he was actually a massive homophobe, it can't be disputed that he was a violent man who hijacked the plight of workers for his guerilla war fantasy.

"¡Hasta la victoria siempre!"

("Ever onward to victory!")

Guevarism is an ideology that promotes exporting a Socialist revolution to countries with a particular, although not exclusive emphasis on guerrilla warfare outside urban areas.

Guild Socialism

This one is okay, i may believe its whole concept of 'trade guilds' to be outdated but it does seem like a plausible way to organise an economy.

"Worker Guilds of the world, unite!"

Guild Socialism is an ideology that advocates for worker ownership of the Means of Production through trade guilds, and that such guilds have "an implied contractual relationship with the public". It originated in the United Kingdom in 1914 with the book "National Guilds: An Inquiry into the Wage System and the Way Out" in which S. G. Hobson presents guilds as an alternative to state socialism. Guild socialism believes in democratic workplaces and varies on government types.

Hamiltonianism

Although he was one of the founding fathers, his personal ideology is now extremely backwards and wrong by today's standards.

So yeah, this one sucks.

"I am not throwing away my shot!"

Hamiltonianism believe in governmental intervention in an economy with a centralized bank. Hamiltonianism dislikes the idea of Free Trade and advocate for protectionism, and thus advocates for high tariffs. Hamiltonianism believes in the creation of an elective constitutional monarchy ruling for life (unless impeached) with extensive powers. Hamiltonianism is also conservative and believe in a strong central government governed by a "natural aristocracy" of the wealthy and educated, believing that voting rights and political representation should be restricted to the upper class of society.

Hayekism

No thanks, not as bad as anarcho-capitalism, but that's not a hard bar to reach.

Also, -10 points for the smug ass quote.

"If socialists understood economics, they wouldn't be socialists."

Hayekism is an ideology based off Friedrich Hayek's ideas. He believes the state should have minimal involvement in the economy aside from basic public services, and that currency should be denationalized and not be a public matter, thus the state can't intervene in the creation of money.

Helvetic Model

While i do respect
Switzerland and Liechtenstein's ability to stay independent, that doesn't make their economic systems any better than another economically liberal nation.

"Unus pro omnibus, omnes pro uno!"
(One for all, all for one!)

The Helvetic Model can be seen as a libertarian response to the Nordic Model, espoused by Social Democrats. Helvet believes that the best society to currently exist in the world right now is the one of Switzerland and of it's smaller neighbor Liechtenstein. With focus being put on low tax rates, openness for international trade, strict neutrality in wars and other international affairs, strict federalism and an abundance of referendums and a lot of individualism, along with very low market intervention from the state.

Hibernocracy

While this is an okay parody of the genuinely dangerous “ZOG” conspiracy theories, i think this veers into mocking not just anti-semitic conspiracies, but also those who are jewish themselves, for example, the quote is mocking the holocaust.

Basically, it's a bit in bad taste.

"Oh Sasanach! Don't you remember about the 1 gorillion people who died in the Drochshaol?"

The Hibernocracy is a parody of the Jewish conspiracy theory claiming that the Irish secretly control or aim to control the world, evidenced by the number of ethnic Irish-Americans present in the American government, media and federal reserves. The term is derived from Hibernia, the Latin name for Ireland. Hibernian conspiracists employ similar terminology and dog whistles used in reference to the Jewish conspiracy, such as substituting the triple parentheses with shamrock emojis to indicate affiliation with Ireland or Irish ancestry. Other "dog whistles" include denying the Irish potato famine, the participation of the Saint Patrick's Battalion in the Mexican-American war and making reference to protocols of the druidic elders of Hibernia.

Hindu Theocracy

While this is a slightly better theocracy than usual due to the acceptance of other faiths clause, it still isn't great as it still bases a government off of a religious book written thousands of years ago which could not predict future issues.

This would lead to people 'interpreting' the book in order to fit their own opinions, therefore defying the concept of a theocracy in itself.

If only the totally real gods could talk, eh?

«ॐ नमो नारायणाय »

Hindu Theocracy is an ideology that seeks to implement Hinduism as the official state religion. Core principles of this include forming a nation where the state itself is ruled based upon Hindu scriptures like the Vedas, Manusmriti etc. They believe in tolerance, and accepting non-Hindus, but also believe in holding a Hindu standard to govern a nation.

Hindutva

This is like the last ideology, but much worse.

At least hindu theocracy isn't openly fascist.

वृहत्तर भारत अमर रहे!

("Long live Greater India!")

Hindutva is an ideology that believes that India is fundamentally a Hindu nation, an expansive state spanning all of Akhand Bharat (Undivided India), designed solely to protect and advance the political, societal, cultural, religious and economic interests of the Hindu community over all others. It promotes unflinching militarization in order for Hindus to secure their martial power and national pride, and often espouses reactionary beliefs.

Hive-Mind Collectivism

Like several thousand sci-fi and dystopian movies show, from a purely emotionless, pragmatic view, this ideology is good.

However, if you add even smidge of emotion and realise that everyone being the exact same and think the exact same thing is horrible and removes every single aspect that makes someone truly human...

Then it isn't so good, to say the least.

"RESISTANCE IS FUTILE"

Hive Mind represents an ideology which emphasizes a unitary and collective intelligence. Hive-Mind Collectivism draws inspiration from the natural world, particularly from the structure and functioning of a beehive, where individual interests are entirely subordinated to the collective good. In this ideology, notions of cultural preservation, private ownership, and individual liberty are seen as obsolete and unnecessary. The Hive, through absolute assimilation, transcends the conflicts and divisions inherent in human societies, achieving a state of harmonious unity that proponents describe as the apex of social evolution. Through this total integration, the Hive envisions a world where each member's thoughts, actions, and goals are seamlessly synchronized, leading to what is perceived as an ideal state of collective consciousness and purpose.

Ho Chi Minh Thought

Not a fan of this one.

Again, communism is way too extreme, let alone having a 'revolutionary attitude', whatever that implies.

I do find it interesting how despite still self-proclaiming itself as communist, modern Vietnam is de-facto capitalist.

"Welcome to the rice fields, motherfucker"

Ho Chi Minh Thought is an ideology which applies the characteristics of Marxism–Leninism to Vietnam. Although named after him, Ho Chi Minh Thought is not based exclusively on Ho Chi Minh's ideas, as it is also based on the ideas of the Communist Party of Vietnam (CPV), and may include ideas espoused by the CPV, even if they differ from, or build upon Ho Chi Minh's own ideas. It is centered around values such as national liberation, class liberation, independence, and a revolutionary attitude.

Homoconservatism

This is better than normal Conservatism, but not by much. Just because you aren't homophobic doesn't make you a good person if you're also still a conservative.

[Gay people voting for right-wing parties be like]

"No gay sex until marriage."

Homoconservatism is an ideology that uses conservative ideas such as support for capitalism and a range of religious and property rights with the added element of LGBT rights, such as same-sex marriage legalization.

Homofascism

I guess the description of this one is technically right, but come on...

This is literally a more accurate example of the leopards eating your face

"Everything within my ass, nothing outside my ass, nothing against my ass"

Homofascists would argue that their fascist positions and ultranationalist positions like ethnic or racial supremacy as well as advocacy for national cohesion and often more conservative social values, do not inherently conflict with being gay or LGBT and/or the acceptance of these people.

Hoppeanism

No, you can't just throw people you don't like out of helicopters, no matter what you call it.

As for the other parts of this ideology, this one sucks, obviously.

"Physically removed, so to speak."

Hoppeanism is an sub-Ideology within Anarcho-Capitalism which puts emphasis on the importance of exclusionary behaviour, communitarianism, social conservatism, and the opposition to Democracy if one is to maintain the continuous existence of the libertarian social order.

Horriovelism

I think this would be a good ideology for a utopian world government, not for a single nation tho, way too vulnerable to cyberattacks from other nations.

"When everyone becomes horrible, no one will be."

Horriovelism is a political ideology that seeks to constitute a form of governance in which the leader's political power completely depends on its citizens. The political system exercises a form of direct E-Democracy, where an ordinary citizen or member of the government has the right to create bills that will be debated over the internet. The economic system that Horriovelism adopts is in which the state invests in automation in economic sectors that ordinary citizens often reject, thus substituting human labor by the robotic, putting these same people to work in the tertiary sector. The state has the role of guaranteeing basic services and rights to the population, such as health and housing.

Horseshoe Centrism

While i don't think Horseshoe Theory is 100% correct, i think ideologies such as communism and nazism are similar in terms of how insane the followers of it is, but ideologically, they are nowhere near alike.

"Two sides of the same coin."

Horseshoe Centrism is a political ideology that believes the more extreme an opinion, the closer it is to its opposite. Arguing that the more moderate ideologies like Social Authoritarianism and Classical Liberalism share more differences than Marxism–Leninism and Anarcho-Capitalism, it believes the extremes are basically the same, considering ideologies like Capitalist Communism to be the result of the "welding" of the edges of the metaphorical horseshoe together.

Hoxhaism

Well it's more extreme than stalin... so yeah, obviously i don't approve.

"Revisionism can't pierce my bunker walls"

Hoxhaism is an ideology based off the ideas of Enver Hoxha, the former socialist leader of Albania. He believes in strict defense of the ideals and governance of Joseph Stalin, believing him to be one of the few non-revisionist leaders. He opposes other socialist leaders, such as Nikita Khrushchev, Mao Zedong, Deng Xiaoping, and Josip Broz Tito, believing them to be revisionists and social imperialists.

Hungarism

National Socialist? No
thanks, burn in hell Imao.

"Kitartás! Éljen Szálasi!"

Hungarism is a Hungarian authoritarian, totalitarian, third positionist and national socialist ideology.

Hutu Power

I'm actually impressed that humans managed to be racist towards an ethnicity that is basically exactly like them in appearance.

Obviously i'm more horrified than impressed, but still, good job, i think...

"Tutsi people? More like Tootsie rolls!"

Hutu Power is an ideology that advocates for Hutu supremacy in Africa and the extermination of the Tutsi and Twa people. Hutus who marry, befriend, or hire Tutsis are considered "traitors". This ideology led to the Rwandan Genocide, a genocide by Hutu extremists against the Tutsi in Rwanda, happening in the mid-90s.

Hydrarchy

OH FUCK YEAH, PIRATES
YEAHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHH

In seriousness, this is like a 20% good one. Obviously the stealing stuff and 'plundering booty' isn't great.

But pirate did have some form of honour, like semi-equal wages.

"Arrrr! Shiver me timbers!"

Hydrarchy meaning Rule of the Waters is a term used to refer to a system of government in which political power is concentrated in pirates. Pirate societies were historically Stateless Societies, who also believe in semi-equal wages (a captain only got twice as much as an average pirate)

Illegalism

Terrible idea, jail for one million years.

"Hand over everything you got! No funny business!"

Illegalism is an ideology and philosophy that claims that criminality is just another lifestyle.

FUCKIGN HELL

ITS DOWN AGAIN

Illiberal Democracy

While there are very specific and extreme scenarios where a democratic nation would have to suspend elections, such as a war or severe nation crisis, rigging elections is something no legitimate government would ever do in any capacity or scale.

A democracy is not a democracy unless elections are fair, impartial and votes are only thrown out due to extreme circumstances, like a paper ballot having two candidates crossed when the election allows only one vote per citizen.

Even if you think you must rig an election in order to 'save your country' from the perceived tyranny of the other side, you should never do it. Betraying the public's choice like that will only drive them further to the 'bad side'.

"Vote for me if you wanna live!"

Illiberal Democracy is an ideology which calls for an elected government which lacks the fundamental characteristics of a liberal democracy.

Illuminatism

No thanks, i'm in favour of a world government but not like this.

~~[Insert comment about how this is just real life or something]~~

[No Quote]

Illuminatism is an ideology that advocates for the world to be controlled by a small and secretive group of extremely powerful people.

Ilminism

[Please ignore that the eyes are somewhat racist, i can't just skip past every single asian ideology on this list]

Obviously bad, South Korea before it was a democracy was almost as bad as North Korea is today.

"We are One People. Loyalty to the country. We are One People. Love to the people. We are One People. Effort to unification."

Ilminism is an ideology that was the ruling ideology of the Republic of Korea under its first president Syngman Rhee and later was heavily reformed & adopted by its third president Park Chung Hee. Ilminism generally believes in creating a loyal and obedient citizenry through centralized state power and authority, strong socio-culturally traditionalist sentiment, and brazen appeals to nationalism and national mysticism.

Imperialism

Pretty bad, this was like THE main ideology back in the day, thankfully it has retreated into the dustbin of history, mostly...

"HIPPIITY HOPPITY YOUR COUNTRY IS NOW MY PROPERTY!"

Imperialism is an ideology that has traditionally believed a country should expand their power or influence through military action. Imperialism was once very popular but has decreased in popularity over the years. Imperialism is noted for its war advocacy and belief that the powerful nations should rule over the weaker ones. Imperialism differs from Nationalism in that it doesn't necessarily believe its nation is the best, but rather believes that the big states in general should rule over the small ones.

Impossibilism

Since i am a Democratic Socialist, i inherently disagree with this ideology since every single time that socialism was attempted via revolution, it was a violent disaster.

Therefore, the name of this ideology is very apt.

"You can't reform your way out of capitalism!"

Impossibilism is an ideology that believes that any reforms to remedy social ills in capitalism are ultimately futile since it believes immediate reforms strengthen capitalism instead of achieving socialism in the long term. Adherents to this ideology support structural changes instead of evolutionary reforms like many democratic socialists.

Independence Anarchism

While i do think anarchism sucks, i will admit that independence for major cultures within a large country is great. So it's a 50/50 kinda thing with this.

Also, theme song slaps, hard punk goes hard in any language.

"Esclaus en peu de guerra!"

Independence Anarchism is a left-wing ideology that emphasizes the autonomy, self-determination or independence of a given people with a common identity from forms of hierarchy, especially centralized ones, in defense of the people's language and the non-reactionary aspects of its culture and history.

Indigenism

Although I normally am against Cultural Nationalism, i think Native Americans do deserve to be at least a little proud of the heritage due to how horribly they were treated by european colonists and later so, Americans.

Basically, as long as it doesn't veer into hatred of other cultures/races or a belief of superiority, being proud of your culture is fine.

"This land is my land!"

Indigenism is an ideology that believes in a certain form of ethnic/cultural nationalism, that emphasizes the group's indigeneity to their homeland. It focuses on indigenous Americans as a people and a desire to have their land and customs returned to them. Indigenous groups also often demand significant reparations for the injustices served toward their people. While this can be representative of numerous indigenous rights movements across the world.

Industrialism

While uncontrolled industrialization is a horrible idea and is the main reason the planet is currently boiling alive, it is needed for society to progress past a certain point since it means less people needed to make essential stuff and therefore more people available to research and do political stuff.

*"Build more factories! More...
More!!!"*

Industrialism is a technological ideology that puts an emphasis on industrialization as one of the most beneficial stages of development for any given civilization.

Ingsoc

[THE FOLLOWING TEXT HAS BEEN EDITED BY THE MINISTRY OF TRUTH]

War is Peace, Freedom is Slavery, and Ignorance is Strength

"War Is Peace. Freedom Is Slavery. Ignorance is Strength"

Ingsoc is an ideology based on George Orwell's classic novel Nineteen Eighty-Four. It is most often described as "the apex of totalitarianism", in which the state has complete control over the individual.

Insurrectionary Anarchism

While i do believe there are VERY limited circumstances where an armed insurrection is justified, it almost always results in hellish decade long civil wars.

That's not even getting into the morals of killing people just because they are 'defending the regime'.

"Hurry to play. Hurry to arm yourself!"

Insurrectionary Anarchism, is an ideology that is part of the Post-Left movement. It advocates an anti-capitalist, anti-statist, and anti-society insurrection using small informal affinity-based groups. These groups should be unorganized and without leaders.

Integral Nationalism

A Monarchy AND a
Theocracy, it's a no from me.

"The French Revolution and its consequences have been a disaster for France."

Integral Nationalism is a doctrine that posits that the state ought to be centered around a strong monarchy wielding executive power and that democracy, parliamentarism and electoralism at a country level are a hazard against the national interest. Integral nationalism is highly traditionalist, and believes that Catholicism should play a central role in structuring society

Integralism

Theocracies are bad, that's it. Also, the theme song has a suspiciously KKK like cover, so there's some bonus cringe points.

"Liberalism is a sin"

Integralism, is an ideology that broadly believes there should be a fully integrated social and political order, based on converging inherited political, cultural, religious, and national traditions of a particular state. Integralism is a deeply traditionalist and reactionary doctrine which rejects the separation of church and state as well as the liberal and egalitarian values of the enlightenment, and believes that the state should submit to spiritual authorities.

Interculturalism

This is my preferred solution to the whole 'Assimilation/Tolerance' debate around immigration.

I know it's close to being a generic centrist viewpoint, but i think slow assimilation into a national culture instead of demanding it right there on the spot.

Excluding ultra-cultural or religious families, this process should happen naturally over a few generations.

"E Pluribus Unum"

Interculturalism is an ideology that holds that while different cultures should be able to co-exist, they should also engage in cross-cultural dialogue, interactions, and cultural fusion with one another. The government should promote common values and ideas between different cultures to hold them together and create a common but diverse identity. Another way to see it is akin to a milder form of "cultural-assimilation" or "globalization", where people of various backgrounds focused less on their cultural backgrounds and more on how their value can help the community's well-being as a whole.

Internationalism

Yeah this is a good one, diplomacy is why people don't just instantly starting throwing nukes at each other. Good job, talking to each other.

[No Quote]

Internationalism is an ideology that stresses the benefits of greater cooperation between nations. It advocates that humans should unite across national boundaries to advance a common cause or interest.

Irredentism

I'm gonna get all smart ass for a second and just say:

"An eye for an eye leaves the whole world blind" - Ghandi

But really, if you go and invade a country that invaded you 3 decades ago, then they're just gonna invade you again in another 3 decades, and then you're gonna invade them back in another 3 decades, and so on and so forth.

"REVENGE FOR STANISTAN!"

Irredentism is an ideology which describes the political manifestation of the desire to reacquire territory considered to be "lost" or "unredeemed". Irredentists may want to reclaim territory that their country once owned, but has since lost, or may feel that their country missed out on reigning over land that they believe rightfully belonged to them.

Islamic Anarchism

I'm against Anarchism AND a faith-based political ideology, so no thanks.

"No gods or masters... but Allah"

Islamic Anarchism is the belief that no one other than Allah is suitable as imam, thus the position should be dispensed with. Rulers inevitably became tyrants, thus the only acceptable course of action is to depose them and go to the path of Anarchy.

Islamic Democracy

While any theology is bad,
this one is slightly better, though it will be a cold day in Jahannam before I support this ideology.

"Do Islam, Be Democracy."

Islamic Democracy is an ideology that attempts to adapt the principles of the Quran with liberal ideas. Whilst believing that Islam is the correct religion, It also believes it must adapt to modern times, and adapt liberal western ideas like democracy, human rights, pluralism, and the rule of law. It forms a middle position between Secularism and Islamic Theocracy, believing that Islam should still have an active role in the state and society but that the state should also be democratic and shouldn't impose strict sharia.

Islamic Populism

While i do think a small amount of populism is good, since people shouldn't just mindlessly support the 'establishment', I resent the idea of populism being hijacked by religious ideals.

The people need logic, reason, and empathy. Not superstition, oppression, and hate.

"From the river to the sea.."

Islamic Populism is an ideology that incorporates Islam into populism. It believes in using Islamic and populist rhetoric.

Islamic Socialism

While (Democratic) Socialism is good, mixing with religion, (just like populism previously) ruins the entire purpose of Socialism.

Socialism should be implemented because it is the best system for the working class, not because it appeases your god.

"Pay the worker his wage before his sweat dries" -Prophet Muhammad

Islamic Socialism is an ideology that seeks to combine Islamic principles with socialism designed to be compatible with the teachings of Islam and to address the economic and social issues that are faced by Muslim-majority countries.

Islamic Theocracy

Theocracies are bad, my lawyer has asked me to remove the rest of this opinion.

”لَا إِلَهَ إِلَّا اللَّهُ مُحَمَّدٌ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ”

(There is no God but Allah, Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah.)

Islamic Theocracy is an ideology where political aspects of Islam are derived from the Qur'an, the Sunnah, Muslim history, and elements of political movements in the Islamic world.

Ismism

Sure, why the hell not?

"Why not teleport two thirds of the Islamic moderates to an island?"

Ismism believes that any and all combination of philosophical and political thought could be transformed into an ideology, regardless of the seriousness or consistency of the statements in question. It is a meta ideology that advocates for merging as many ideologies as possible into one, the longer the ideology name, the better.

Isolationism

This one isn't great. A nation cannot prosper by just shutting its eyes and not talking.

A nation must be proactive in international affairs if it wishes to maintain or grow its relevance, as well as protect the rights of those abroad.

"No, I don't care about your wars!"
Leave me alone already!"

Isolationism is an ideology which believes that its nation's interests are the most important, and it wants to keep the affairs of other countries at a distance.

Italian Left Communism

How the hell is there a communist ideology more extreme than Stalinism? It's almost impressive in a terrifying way.

Anyway, terrible idea

"Damn those who talk about dogmas!"

Left Communism is an ideology that is based off of the ideas and writings of the Italian left-communists. It opposes democracy, anti-fascism and the concept of a "Popular Front". It also opposes Marxism–Leninism, believing it to be a bourgeois current. It regards Stalin as a bourgeois opportunist and regards other Marxist-Leninist revolutionaries, such as Fidel Castro, Che Guevara, Ho Chi Minh and Mao Zedong as bourgeois

Jacksonian Democracy

Uh oh

Dislikes

Abolitionists (mostly)

Uh oh

Blacks

UH OH

Indians

“One man with courage makes a majority”

Jacksonian Democracy is an ideology based around the ideas of the 7th president of the United States, Andrew Jackson. It incorporates, among other elements: National Agrarianism, white male suffrage, Manifest Destiny, Populism, and civil engagement.

Jacobinism

While i do wholeheartedly support this ideologies beliefs, their methods were a bit...

choppy

You can't just execute everyone who you perceive as 'enemies of the revolution' that's how either mass murder or brutal dictatorships begin.

"Vivre libre ou mourir!"

Jacobinism is an ideology that originates from the Age of Enlightenment and advocates for a revolution against the traditional European society and the establishment of an egalitarian republic. Jacobinism supports radically transforming society quickly and violently, by removing organised religion and executing noblemen, clergymen and royals, because they, in the Jacobinist view, oppressed humanity for millennia and must be punished and brought to justice, or else they will seek to undermine the Republic which will allow them to oppress humanity once more.

Jacobitism

Absolute Monarchy? Bad

Divine Right Of Kings? Made Up

King? Deposed

Hotel? Trivago

"Fucking Williamites get out of my country!"

Jacobitism is an ideology based on the ideas after of the Glorious Revolution of 1688. The main doctrines of Jacobitism are the Divine Right of Kings, Anti-Unionism and that the king can not be deposed no matter what. Though the ideology varied throughout the UK. Jacobites also believed that Absolute and Arbitrary powers are separate and that the king must use his powers, ordained by the oath to God himself, to benefit the people and to provide law and justice.

Jeffersonian Democracy

This is one of those ideologies that's purpose has kinda faded with history. Despite that, I do agree that farmers are very important in society, although just not enough to centre society around them.

"When injustice becomes law, resistance becomes duty."

Jeffersonian Democracy is a political movement that was dominant in the United States in the early 19th century. It is dedicated to the ideals of Thomas Jefferson, it is opposed to the corruption of elitists and merchants, valuing planters and farmers as the true backbone of the republic.

Jewish Anarchism

Sorry man, i don't think the solution to extreme racial tension is anarchy, that sounds like a great way to unleash hell in one of the world's most sensitive regions.

”מה לגבי פתרון אפס המדינות?”

(“How about a no-state solution?”)

Jewish Anarchism is the belief that mortal kings and rulers are bound to become tyrants, and that the true "Kingdom under God" described in the Torah is anarchy.

Jewish Theocracy

Theocracies are bad, no matter how much your people were persecuted in the past.

“שלח את עמי”

(“Let my people go!”)

Jewish Theocracy is an ideology that believes Judaism should be the state religion of the country and the law of the Tanakh should be the law of the State. It could be ruled with the help of a court of rabbis, a king, or even by judges.

Jewish-Nazism

If someone can show me one person who genuinely believes in this ideology, I will give them £10 in peanuts

"As a Jew, I love the person who killed Hitler!"

Jewish Nazism is a term for any ideology that seeks to synthesise elements of Jewish identity with Nazism. It occupies a largely similar space on the compass as Nazism, being economically third positionist and extremely authoritarian, in addition to being culturally far-right. It is most notably used to represent the Association of German National Jews which was a group of Jews in Weimar Germany that sought the complete assimilation of Jews into German culture and ethnicity. Due to Nazism's anti-Semitism being its most notorious element, Judeonazism is considered as highly contradictory by pretty much everyone and the concept is usually used for shock humour.

Jihadism

Even worse than regular islamic theocracy for obvious reasons.

Don't kill people because your god told you to, if i did that, i'd be sectioned for delusion and schizophrenia.

"ALLAHU AKBAR!!!!!!!!!!"

Jihadism is an extremist variant of Islamic Theocracy that seeks to establish sharia law and Islamic rule through violent

Jingoism

Bad as well.

Every inch of land fought for without cause is a life lost without reason.

Also, look at this recommendation i got while searching russian Youtube for music.

New

"Death to Neighbourstan!!!"

Jingoism is an ideology that advocates for an extremely aggressive foreign policy to supposedly protect the nation from enemy forces and advance its interests. Jingoists tend to support militarization in order to heavily increase war-readiness.

Juche

Take a look at North Korea and tell me that it's a good reason that this ideology is good. Way too much power over life, idealisation of 'national strength', etc.

“천리마의 기상을 온 세상에 떨치자!”

(Let's show the entire world the spirit of the Chollima!)

Juche is an ideology that advocates for a highly centralized state with absolute control over political, economic, and social affairs. Juche emphasizes self-sufficiency, prioritizing independence from external influences, and believes that national strength is the foundation of a prosperous society. The ideology stresses unwavering loyalty to the nation's leadership, with the leader serving as the ultimate guiding force in shaping national policy and direction.

Kahanism

Without using the 'because my religion is right and everybody else's are wrong' argument, make a good, rational, and convincing argument in favour of this ideology, you have 10 years, starting... now!

משחקים ישראלים וצועדים!

"קדימה" ("Israel games and marches forward")

Kahanism is an ideology based on the views and thoughts of Rabbi Meir Kahane that all Jews should live in Israel, anti-Semitism: Anti-Semitism should be fought immediately and by all means necessary, a theocracy should exist in Israel where voting is for Jews only. hate and violence were terrible but terribly necessary at the right time and place. every Jew should have enough Torah knowledge to be a qualified rabbi and that Israel should invade all of the land of greater Israel.

Kakistocracy

~~Bad idea, obviously~~

Best ideology in the world, smash like if you shit and fart every time

"I shitted and farted on my pants"

Kakistocracy itself is the proverbial "Rule of the Stupid" or more literally "Rule of the Worst", and while the concept of Kakistocracy has existed for as long as stupid people have ruled.

Kemalism

While i don't support nationalism, I will support almost anyone that challenges Erdogan and his shitty proto-theocratic regime.

"O Turkish youth, your first duty is to preserve and defend the Turkish independence and republic forever."

Kemalism is the ideology of Mustafa Kemal Atatürk. Modern day Kemalism has three main factions: Social-Democratic, conservative and liberal Kemalism. All three factions belongs an electoral alliance called the 'Nation Alliance' nowadays to challenge Erdogan's government. The support of historical variants such as Fascist Kemalism and Socialist Kemalism has now mostly diminished.

Keynesian School

This one is 50/50 for me, raising taxes is good since it means the government has more money to provide welfare, but 'cutting spending' usually just means gutting welfare, so no thanks.

"Me Tutore Tutus Eris"

(With me as leader you will be safe)

The Keynesian School is an economic theory that believes that the state should intervene in the economy to level out the economic cycle so businesses can make long-term investments and allow for long-run growth. It does this by lowering taxes, lowering interest rates, and increasing spending when the economy busts, but also by cutting spending, raising interest rates, and raising taxes during economic booms.

Khomeinism

Not good, Iran's government is horrific and totalitarian and it's very generous to refer to Hezbollah as a 'political party'.

[No Quote]

Khomeinism is a variant of Shia Theocracy that seeks to revolt and establish sharia law. It derives itself from Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, leader of Iran's 1979 Islamic Revolution. It is the governing ideology of the Islamic Republic of Iran, and the ideology of the militant Lebanese political party Hezbollah.

Khrushchevism

While this ideology is much better than Stalinism, it's still borderline totalitarian and a one party state is always bad.

Khrushchev did a great job at reforming the USSR, but sadly did not go far enough.

"Corn is life, and Stalin is cringe.
We will bury you!"

Khrushchevism is a moderate version of Marxism–Leninism created by Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev with a primary focus on De-Stalinization and subsequent relative liberalization of cultural policies and small parts of the economy, while preserving an authoritarian, one party, socialist state, and the planned economy. It also prioritizes the needs of the people over the state, emphasizing investments in agriculture and consumer goods over the military and heavy industry. Khrushchev dismantled Gulags, freed millions of political prisoners, and enacted a cultural thaw with more cultural exchange with Western nations, as well as liberalizations of arts, abortions, and marriage.

Kleptocracy

This is one of those ideologies that nobody actually believes but is just used as an insult against regimes, whether it be true or false.

Obviously, this one is bad.

"Well, when the president does it, that means it is not illegal."

Kleptocracy is a government whose corrupt leaders use political power to expropriate the wealth of the people and land they govern, typically by embezzlement or misappropriation of government funds at the expense of the wider population.

Korwinism

While Korwin does say controversial stuff, this seems to mostly just be ways to get attention. However, that doesn't change that his genuine beliefs suck ass.

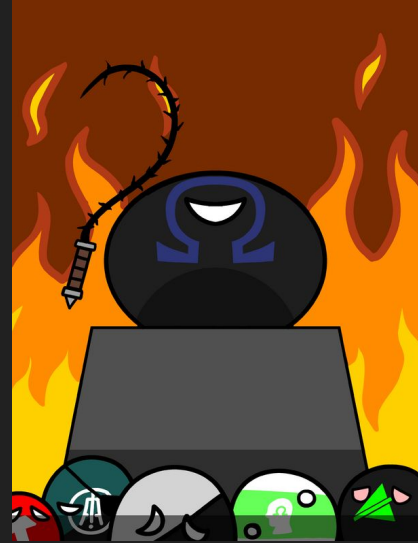

"There is no proof that Hitler knew about the Holocaust."

Korwinism is an ideology based on the teachings of Janusz Korwin-Mikke and the parties he's been part of. Korwinism's policies include: rebuilding the culture and traditions of Latin civilization, implementation of the eternal human aspirations for freedom, respect for private property, decreasing the overall role of the state, strengthening the role of the family and creating favorable conditions for its development, etc.

Kraterocracy

Bad

Also, If the 'strong' are so powerful, why do they need the 'weak' to do their labour for them?

"Might makes right!"

Kraterocracy is an ideology rooted in the belief that it is the inherent and natural right of the strong to dominate, subjugate, and tyrannize the weak. Kraterocracy demands the weaks' complete subjugation, forcing them into a state of total servitude to the will of the powerful. Under this ideology, strength—whether physical, mental, or tactical—is the ultimate currency, and weakness is regarded as a justification for oppression rather than a condition to be eradicated.

Kritarchy

While this is one of the less bad ideologies on this list, it's still not ideal. People need more than just a qualification in law to run a country.

"The court has found you guilty and you must pay a $5000 fine for property damages."

Kritarchy is a system of government in which power is mainly held by judges.

La Plaineism

These guys were better than the Jacobins but it was bad how they betrayed the other moderates in the National Assembly.

50/50 I guess.

"Guys we should really focus on preventing the collapse of the French Republic at the moment not political partisanship"

La Plaineism is an ideology meant to portray the faction of independent delegates within the French National Convention. La Plaineism is generally moderate in most opinions, advocating for Big Tent Politics.

Labour Zionism

While this is better than regular Zionism, it's not by much.

Sorry man, but being socialist doesn't excuse you from occupying land that isn't yours. [That's the UN, not me, saying that Palestine isn't their land]

כן, מדינה סוציאליסטית עם רוב יהודי התשובה הכי מבוססת לשאלה
"היהודית."

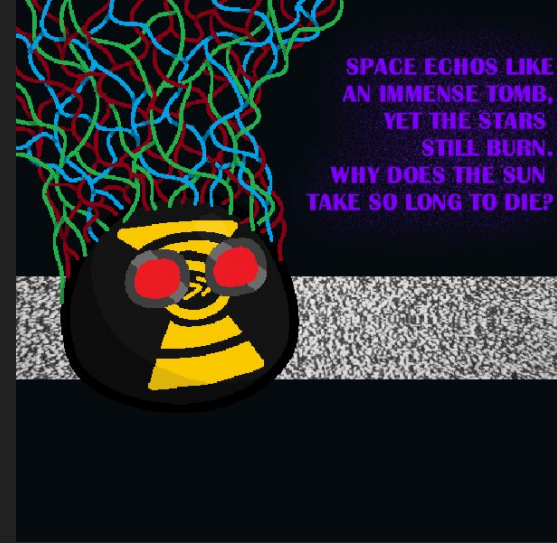

Yes, a socialist state with a jewish majority is the most based answer for the jewish question.

Labour Zionism is a secular Jewish and economically left-wing ideology.

Landian Accelerationism

The wiki has basically no information about this one but the likes section seems cool.

Accelerationism is ridiculous, like i said near the start of this whole adventure

"The truth is that we haven't seen anything yet"

Lawsonomy

What the-

Okay, the description is a bit bizarre, trying to be some middle ground between Capitalism and Socialism but the whole 'matching uniforms' thing seems very cult-like.

Also, what's up with the weird collages and quote? Theme song is cool tho.

"Poo has calcium in it"

Lawsonomy is a rather complex ideology that combines religion, economics, and 'science' (whatever Lawsonomy dictates as scientific fact and usually not actual science). It is based on a following and adherence to "natural laws" while its followers mimicked a sort of military with matching uniforms and internal structure. A main point is that Lawsonomy sees that banks are the root cause of all economic problems and fears because banks are the oppressors of both Capital and Labor. Lawsonomy also encourages followers to educate themselves at one of the many Lawsonian colleges to reach the level of Knowledgian, it only takes a mere 30 years.

Left-Rothbardianism

Firstly, screw you for butchering one of the best revolution songs ever.

Secondly, the concept of claiming unowned land via labour would be chaos, borders around the world would be built up like hell just so countries could claim 'It's theirs now because they built a longer wall'.

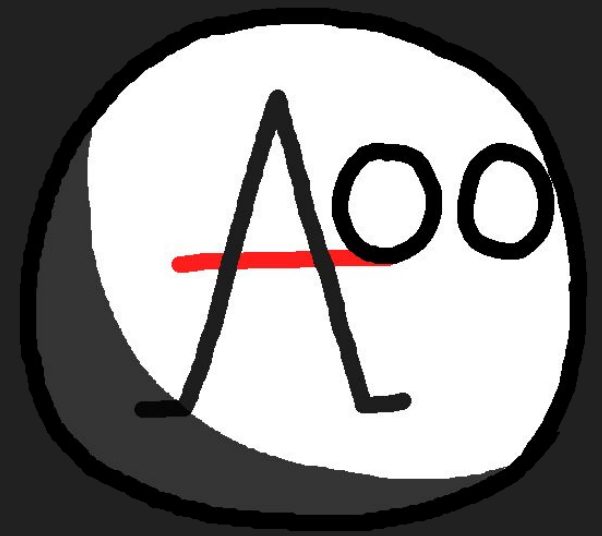

[No Quote]

Left-Rothbardianism believes in a Neo-Lockean homesteading principle. The principle as a whole states that property can only be legitimately owned by 2 means, direct trade from the past owner or applying your labor to unowned land, and it uses this principle to found its claim on the confiscation of "private" property, specifically the part where it states that applying your labor to un-owned property is legitimate leads to legitimate ownership of said property.

Left-Wing Market Anarchism

Sorry, this just sounds exactly like Anarcho-Capitalism in a left-wing disguise.

"Markets, not capitalism!"

Market Anarchism believes that a strict application of natural rights, self-ownership, and totally unregulated Austrian economics in a stateless society will "eat the rich", resulting in a much more equal society than a state regulated Capitalism one could offer.

Left-Wing Nationalism

A socialist who abandons his fellow man simply due to being born on the other side of a border, is no socialist.

"FOR THE MOTHERLAND!"

Left-Wing Nationalism is an ideology that advocates for collective ownership of the means of production, in combination with anti-imperialism, egalitarianism, international solidarity, national self-determination and national sovereignty.

Left-Wing Populism

While i despise most people in the Left-Wing Populism space, I will admit that I do consider myself as this, even if it is less hostile than most.

Basically, power to the people, not those who claim to speak for them.

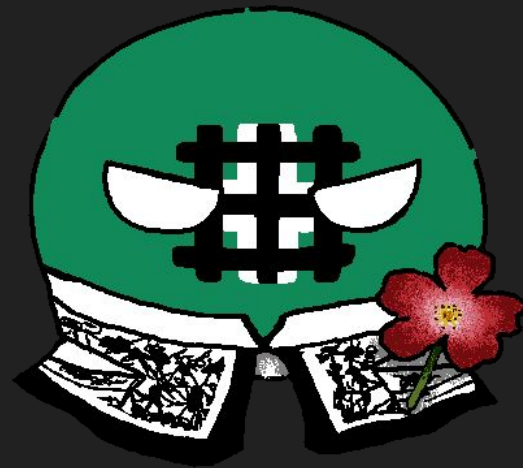

"Occupy Wall Street! We are the 99%!"

Left-Wing Populism is an ideology that emphasizes the popular frustrations of the working class for political gain. Its proponents often advocate some form of Socialism. It saw a rise after the events of the Financial crisis of 2007-2008 and the Europe debt crisis, leading to movements like Occupy Wall Street. It believes that it is the only viable way to fight off Neoliberalism and that Right-Wing Populism will only make it stronger. Like its right-wing counterpart, it opposes the EU for the most part, but is usually more open to reforming it rather than abolishing it.

Legionarism

Obviously bad, Also most of the songs on this one's page were taken down for hate speech, so that's fun.

"Trăiască Legiunea Arhanghelului Mihail!"

(Long live the legion of archangel Michael)"

This video has been removed for violating YouTube's policy on hate speech. Learn more about combating hate speech in your country.

Learn more

Legionarism is a political movement founded by Corneliu Zelea Codreanu in 1927. The movement was characterized by extreme opposition to both capitalism, communism, and democracy, and support for Orthodox Christianity, totalitarianism, national revolution and Nazi Germany.

Leninism

While this is better than Stalinism, Lenin was still way too extreme for my tastes.

"Complete victory over capitalism cannot be won unless the proletariat and, following it, the mass of working people in all countries and nations throughout the world voluntarily strive for alliance and unity."

Leninism is an ideology based on the beliefs of the Russian revolutionary and first leader of the Soviet Union Vladimir Lenin. It believes in the establishment of a Dictatorship of the Proletariat led by a Revolutionary Vanguard Party. It advocates for the full abolishment of private property and is in favor of socialist publicly owned property.

LesbiaNRx

I hate no idea what this one is about, it's too much for my mammal brain.

"Nothing male makes it out of the near-future"

This is way too insane to fit into this box, just read it here.

Liberal Conservatism

While this is better than regular conservatism in terms of social issues, its economic ideology is still flawed.

*"The more conservative society is,
the more free we are."*

Liberal Conservatism is an ideology that incorporates the Classical Liberal view of minimal government intervention in the economy, according to which individuals should be free to participate in the market and generate wealth without government interference. However, unlike most conservatives, they're often socially liberal on certain issues.

Liberal Feminism

While I do prefer a more proactive style of feminism, at the end of the day, It's an individual woman's choice on how to advocate for themselves, not the choice of some politically interested guy.

More Female CEOs!

Liberal Feminism is an ideology that advocates that women should be allowed to maintain gender equality through their own actions and choices.

Liberal Socialism

This is one of the few ideologies I'd happily endorse, like it's pretty much the framework for my hyper-specific personal ideology.

"Liberals of the world, unite!"

Liberal Socialism is an ideology which holds that Socialism is compatible with Liberalism. Generally, Liberal Socialism believes in a form of reformist socialism within the framework of liberal democracy through unions, cooperatives, targeted nationalization, and the expansion of welfare. This is reconciled with liberalism as an expansion of the democratic principle to the sphere of economics, and Liberal Socialism views socialism as an ideology fundamentally based in freedom. It rejects strict adherence to Marxism and instead bases its philosophy on humanism, pragmatism, and skepticism.

Liberalism

This is much better than a lot of ideologies, but i still think it's nowhere near leftist enough for me to say I like it.

Despite that, I do respect people who still identify as liberals due to how much the word has been twisted into just 'whatever the right doesn't like'

"Liberté, égalité, fraternité."

Generally, Liberalism has four main tenets:

Governmental respect for individual liberty, ensured equality of opportunity under the law, a free and open-market economy, constitutionally limited government power and the separation of religious and state power

Libertarianism

[Have fun trying to pronounce this one]

Anyway, this is basically the same as the previous one but I like it even less since it's more economically right-wing.

[NO QUOTE]

Libertarianism is a mostly utilitarian ideology that believes in relatively small government, individualism, a live and let live philosophy, the ease of doing business and free markets, but arguing that full on laissez-faire economics aren't the way to go, and aim for a more moderate view.

Liberation Theology

This one is a mixed bag. Theocracies are bad, but Liberation Theology seems to use Christian beliefs as a platform to support Socialism, not the reverse.

So i guess, it would depend on the specific variant on if it wants a theocratic government or not.

[NO QUOTE]

Liberation Theology is an ideology and form of Christian theology that seeks to liberate all oppressed peoples, particularly the poor.

Libertarian Conservatism

This is even worse than regular libertarianism.

How exactly are you meant to enforce conservative values with minimal state powers?

"IT'S HAPPENING!"

Libertarian Conservatism is an ideology that is a combination of Conservatism and Libertarianism. It advocates for the greatest economic freedom and least possible government interference, both in the economy and social life as a whole, mirroring Classical Liberal Laissez-Faire Capitalism. It prioritizes liberty and freedom of choice and believes this will help to serve conservative ends

Libertarian Feminism

This is a little better than Conservative Libertarianism
but it's still terrible, economically speaking.

"Don't tread on she"

Libertarian Feminism is an ideology that advocates that the best way to emancipate women is by the means of the freest possible markets and that having free choice is more important than being coerced into an ideal womanhood. It has traits in common with choice feminism given its emphasis that women aren't a hivemind and should be free to express themselves without obstruction or harming others.

Libertarian Monarchism

While Libertarianism and Monarchism seems like a bizarre combination, It does make sense due to it being a Constitutional Monarchy.

Despite that, this ideology still sucks, sorry.

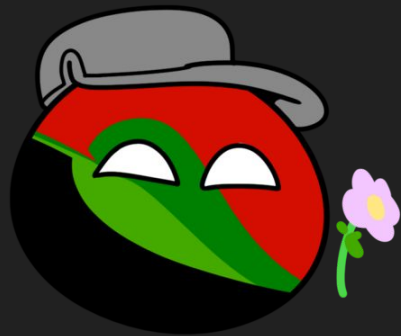

"Don't tread on royalty"

Libertarian Monarchism is an ideology which believes that a libertarian society should be ruled over by a Constitutional Monarch.

Libertarian Municipalism

Considering I don't like most Anarchist ideologies, this is actually pretty good.

Nowhere near what I would consider a good direction for society but this is probably the best Anarchist ideology so far.

"The ecological crisis is a social crisis!"

Libertarian Municipalism is an ideology that believes in a stateless and classless society where hierarchy is reduced as much as possible and is organized into eco-communes that participate in federalism with most private property being made communal.

Libertarian Possibilism

This is a pretty okay one too.
It's end goal sucks, but pragmatically speaking, i doubt an anarchist political party is likely to get many votes.

[NO QUOTE]

Libertarian Possibilism is an ideology that seeks to achieve anarchist goals of ending the state and capitalism through the usage of current parliamentary structures.

Libertarian Socialism

This one is SOOOOO close to entering the Cool Ideologies Club but personally, I believe that the state should have a significant amount of power in order to regulate the economy. I'm not in favour of full on economic planning though.

"Don't tread on US!"

(That includes you, corporations!)"

Libertarian Socialism encompasses a wide range of ideologies, but mainly rejects the conception of socialism as a statist form where the state bureaucracy retains centralized control of the economy.

Libertarian Transhumanism

This one sucks, i've already made my opinion very clear about Libertarians, but I'm also pretty hesitant when it comes to transhumanism. Cybernetic implants and gene editing is cool, but it has to be made freely available to everyone.

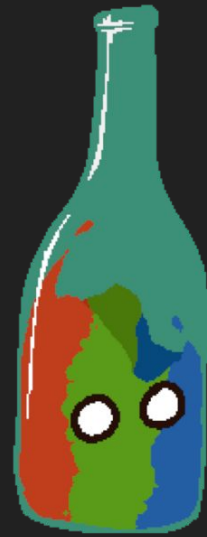

"Genetically modified voluntary hive-minds should be able to defend their asteroid mining businesses with nuclear-powered plasma cannons"

Libertarian Transhumanism is an ideology that its main belief is that a severely minimized state and/or no state at all combined with free market economics and the technological progress of human civilization into eventually colonising the galaxy are complimentary ideals.

Liquid Democracy

This one isn't great, Granny Farming is already known as a problem and I doubt letting people delegate their votes would actually increase turnout a significant amount.

"Blub blub blub..."

Liquid Democracy is a system of democracy where voters have the choice to vote directly or delegate their vote to another individual.

Localism

This one is okay, supporting the local area is important but it shouldn't get to the point of every town having fully closed off economies, that's not good for anyone.

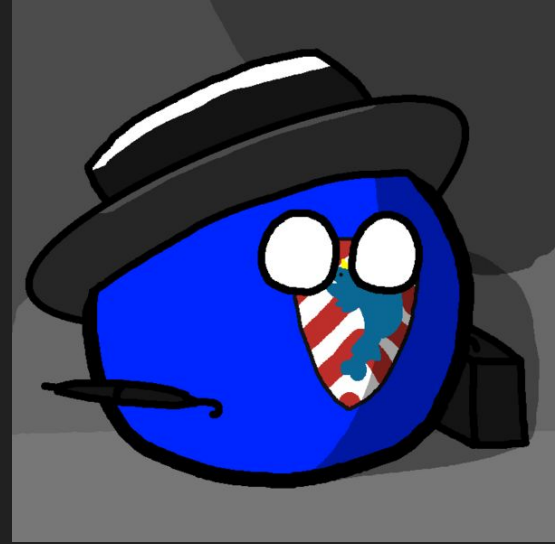

I like my town, alright?!

Localism is a philosophy that champions the significance of local communities and economies. It encourages decision-making and problem-solving at the closest possible level to those affected. Advocates believe this approach fosters greater participation, accountability, and responsiveness. As a counterbalance to globalization, localism also emphasizes the preservation of local identities, cultures, and economies, and promotes sustainable, self-sufficient practices.

Longism

This one is conservative but It's great otherwise.

Also, the song is great even if it seems kinda culty.

"There'll be peace without end, every neighbour a friend, and every man a king!"

Longism is an ideology that wants to heavily regulate the markets with his "Share Our Wealth" plan, which involved taxing the rich to fund social programs for free education, old-age pensions, public works, and large subsidies for families.

Luddism

Honestly, with the rise of AI and it guzzling power plants like breakfast bars, i'm not exactly opposed to this ideology.

Also, before you mass-automate jobs, please implement UBI or something otherwise we'll have Luddite riots again.

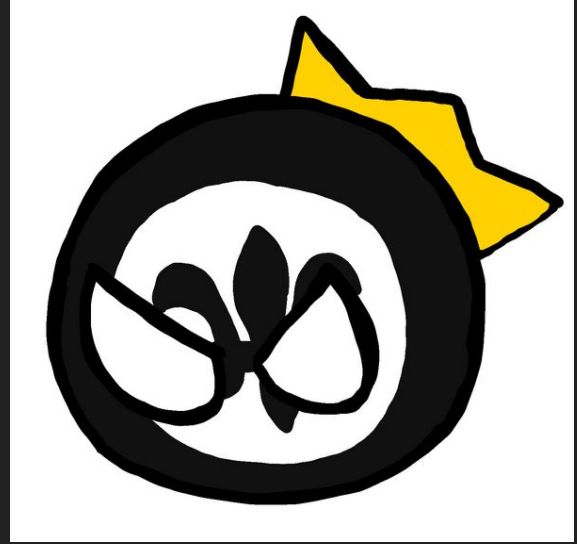

TEXTILES WILL NOT REPLACE
US!

Luddism is an ideology that represents opposition to increased industrialization and new technology.

Lys Noir

I don't really have an opinion on this one.

I guess, Anarcho-Royalism is bad, but i admire the fact that they actually support such a contradictory ideology.

"LES LYS ARRIVENT!"

Lys Noir is an anarcho-royalist ideology, being one of the few real life movements to support the otherwise satirical ideology. Despite its self-proclaimed far-right nature, it takes inspiration from various far-left, populist, and neoluddite thinkers.

Machajskism

This ideology is way too exclusionary. Intellectuals don't depend on hereditary monopoly, that's just a side effect of high university fees and neighborhood wealth distribution.

Down with the Intelligentsia!

Machajskism argues that the class interests of intellectuals, including Marxist social democrats, are opposed to that of manual workers, since the unproductive labour of intellectuals depended upon preserving a hereditary monopoly on education at workers' expense. Rather than put their hopes in political revolution, revolution would consist of a violent revolt of the unemployed worker-peasants.

Machiavellianism

Sometimes in politics, you do have to be pragmatic.

However, becoming fully pragmatic does tend to isolate you from any sense of emotion or feelings, of any kind.

Ideology is an important factor in a government, otherwise you'll just get weird centrists every election.

"Ambition is the only virtue."

Machiavellianism is a political ideology representing an approach that prioritizes the acquisition and maintenance of power, often through pragmatic or self-serving strategies. This approach emphasizes the practical application of political skills and decisions - what could be described as a focus on "political praxis" over ideological consistency or moral considerations.

Manosphere

While some 'Manosphere' ideologies are okay, like actual mens right advocates, not just misogynists in a trenchcoat, most Manosphere ideologies are just various brands of sexism and concerning attitudes towards women.

"Women bad!"

Manosphere is a collection of Men's Rights Movements typically characterized by a focus on re-empowering masculinity and anti-feminism. Manosphere covers the various broad male-focused movements such as the men's rights movement, incels, Men Going Their Own Way, pick-up artists and the fathers' rights movement and often have various off-shoots that vary significantly in ideology.

Mao-Spontex

While violent revolutions aren't great since they usually just end in a dictatorship worse than the previous regime, this is much better than a normal revolution, since it at least is lead by those who a revolution claims to represent.

"Maoism is a movement full of spontaneity!"

Mao-Spontex is an ideology that believes that a revolution should occur from below through mass action by the working class as opposed to with the aid of a vanguard party, professional revolutionaries or political parties.

Maoism

No thanks, impressive body count tho.

"Long Live the Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution!"

Maoism is a type of Marxism-Leninism associated with Mao Zedong, the chairman of the Communist Party of China. Maoism can be identified as economically far-left, totalitarian, and culturally far-left.

Maoism—Third Worldism

Anti-Imperialism [when it applies to everyone, not just the US] is great but this ideology is as unhinged as the image.

For the joint-dictatorship of the proletariat of oppressed nations!

Maoism—Third Worldism is an ideology that argues for the importance of anti-imperialism to the victory of global communist revolution.

Mariateguism

Average regional communist ideology, just as bad as usual communism.

"¡No más pobres en un país rico!"

Mariateguism is an ideology based around the theories and beliefs of José Carlos Mariátegui, a Marxist philosopher who founded the Peruvian Communist Party. Mariátegui's ideas can be described as a synthesis of Marxism-Leninism and Indigenism.

Market Socialism

Holy shit, this is actually great, cooperatives are the best form of a company.

I found a replacement for Liberal Socialism in my ideology trinity.

"Markets of the world, unite!"

Market Socialism is an ideology that is unique as a leftist ideology in that it is one of the few that views markets as beneficial. Market Socialism wants widespread workers' self-management within the framework of a market economy. Each worker can either directly own their workplace or vote to elect their managers.

Marxism

While Marx did have great intentions, his ideology is nothing but naive. It's laughable that a dictatorship-like government would just willingly let society become fully communist through 'transitory steps'.

Full communism is also no better than Anarchism too.

*"From each according to his ability,
to each according to his needs."*

Marxism is an ideology that looks to achieve a communist (stateless, classless, moneyless) society. According to Marx and Engels, in a communist society, nationality, families, private property, commodities, division of labor, cities and countryside, religion, ideology, and markets would be abolished or become obsolete and fade away.

Marxism–Leninism

This is basically the same as Stalinism but more vague, which means it's slightly better.

I still wouldn't touch it with a 10 yard poland though.

"Workers of the world, unite!"

Marxism–Leninism is an ideology based on Joseph Stalin's ideological synthesis of Marxism and Leninism, it was the core ideology of the world communist movement, with practically every communist state in history proclaiming Marxism-Leninism as their guiding ideology.

Marxism–Leninism–Maoism

Make an ideology more coherent by adding an extra adjective to it? Sure...

Basically as bad as the previous ideologies, also, the theme song sucks, even for a rap song it has no flow.

"The masses are the future of our revolution, and our revolution is the future for the masses!"

Marxism–Leninism–Maoism is a synthesis of Marxism–Leninism and Maoism and is claimed to be a unified, coherent higher stage of Marxism.

Marxist Feminism

Feminism is great and the song is beautiful.

But sadly, I simply cannot support Marxism.

Women of the world unite!

Marxist Feminism is an ideology that focuses on women's emancipation, gender equality, intersectionality, and the liberation of women through feminism and socialism.

Maternalism

While yes, men and women are different biologically, that doesn't mean that they have to play 'separate roles'.

A woman can work and a man can be a stay at home dad, if it works for them, it's none of your business.

"Motherhood is the greatest honor a woman can have!"

Maternalism can be generally defined by the belief that men and women are "Equal but Different" and that the sexes have distinct roles to play, this is in contrast to much of modern Feminism, whom Maternalists would argue to consider men and women identical or nearly identical in terms of capability.

Matriarchal Monarchism

Some as regular monarchism, not great.

"God save the Queen!"

Matriarchal Monarchism is an ideology that supports monarchy but believes that the monarch should always be a queen. This could be due to cultural/spiritual beliefs, or the belief that women are more capable for that position.

RIP Queen Liz

Matriarchy

Just as bad as a patriarchy.

"Don't smash on me, you masculinist!"

Matriarchy is a political system that concentrates political power into the hands of women and directly opposes Patriarchy.

Mediacracy

Media should play a big role in society, but i don't think that it should be the main aspect of a society, otherwise it just borders on propaganda.

We interrupt this slideshow to bring you Breaking News!

Mediacracy is a form of government in which political power is concentrated within Mass Media

Mediocracy

The argument for this isn't great. How exactly is the most 'average' person determined.

Also, explicitly hiring someone who isn't skilled enough for leading a country is a terrible idea.

"Three out of five ain't bad."

Mediocracy is a form of government where a class of mediocre individuals are more dominant in society. While this ideology is mostly a joke, one could make the argument that the average person in society is its best representative and as such should control the nation.

Men's Liberation

This one is great, just like female gender roles, male gender roles are ridiculous and not rooted in biology for the most part.

Men are not biologically programmed to work out and be strong. Just like how women aren't programmed to cook and be weak.

[NO QUOTE]

Men's Liberation is a movement focused on the restraints that modern society puts on men, particularly their ability to openly express their feelings and emotions, and to undertake traditionally not "manly" tasks.

Mercantilism

This one is not great. Nowadays, economic globalism has made it almost impossible to have minimal imports while also having an high living standard for your people.

Economic self-sufficiency is a noble goal, but not when it is done at the citizen's expense or out of xenophobia.

"I'M NOT BUYING YOUR STUPID PRODUCT!"

Mercantilism is an economic policy that strives to increase the exports of a nation but decrease the imports to it. It is an ideology that believes that the state should be the primary recipient of wealth.

Meritocracy

On the surface, this is a great system.

However, the problem of “how do we determine who is most suitable for a role and who decides that?”

I think it could be good, but we haven't invented a 100% unbiased job machine yet, so sadly this one is flawed.

"Who's got talent?"

Meritocracy is an ideology and system based on the talent and effort of individuals instead of their wealth or placement in a social class. The way of advancing in this system is by performance and achievement.

Metaxism

The greeks did invent loads of great inventions during the ancient era.

But xenophobia and 'assimilation' is not the way to restore that greatness.

Ελευθερία ή θάνατος! Εμπρός, για μια Νέα Ελλάδα!

(Freedom or Death! Forward, for a New Greece!)

Metaxism is an Ideology that wants to create a "Third Hellenic Civilization". Metaxism believes that minorities within Greece should assimilate to the Greek national identity and that it should be forbidden to use languages other than Greek in public or in private.

Mexican Fascism

Just a regional variant of facism, bad and cringe.

"Mexico is a nation farmed in blood, soil, and spirit!"

Mexican Fascism looks up to the Second Mexican Empire as the nation's golden era, praising its high-ranking conservative politicians and Emperor Maximilian I. It rejects the republic as a failure that is to blame for much of the nation's long-standing problems and a model based on imported French ideas incompatible with the Mexican nation.

Minarchism

Not as bad as anarchism, but pretty close and at least most anarchists don't endorse unregulated capitalism.

"Get off my lawn, damn hooligans!"

Minarchism is a political ideology which seeks to establish a form of governance in which state intervention is as minimal as possible while still maintaining a broadly functional society.

Minarcho-Socialism

Not great, how exactly can you provide the welfare of socialism while having a 'minimal' government?

I like this art tho

"No more 'socialist' tyrants!"

Minarcho-Socialism is an ideology that seeks to combine worker owned means of production with an "as minimal as possible" state to ensure the protection of workers and their rights.

Mladorossism

All these big words are hurting my brain but i don't think this is a very good idea.

"Tsar and the Soviets!"

The ideology of the Mladorossi was a blend of Monarchism and Soviet-inspired elements. At its core, the movement sought to synthesize conservative and revolutionary principles, envisioning the revival of Russian statehood through a unique formula: "The Tsar and the Soviets." This slogan symbolized their aim to fuse an autocratic monarchy with de-Bolshevized, non-partisan Soviets as self-governing entities. The envisioned state, described as an "ideocratic autocratic monarchy," was to be above class interests while maintaining a "social" character, drawing inspiration from historical figures like Peter the Great and Alexander II.

Moderatism

While a good amount of moderation is needed to prevent society from just going to extremist hell, having so much that the two main parties of a country are basically the same is way too much.

"I have no strong feelings one way or the other."

Moderatism is a centrist ideology that has no strong opinions on any political discussion and is more of an idea than an ideology.

Monarchism

Same as what i said with absolute monarchy at the start of this whole journey

"Long live the King!"

Monarchism is an ideology that believes in a government with a monarch at the head. Monarchs are rulers who govern a country until they die or are abdicated and hold titles like king or queen.

Monarcho-Capitalism

While a totalitarian monarch would be able to ensure 'fair competition', whatever fair competition is would be completely up to their subjective standards.

Not to mention the fact that a totalitarian monarch could just as easily enforce a monopoly for their own benefit.

"All people inherit wealth, but kings inherit the knowledge of it."

Monarcho-Capitalism believes that a capitalist economic system is able to function the best with a monarch at the head of the state. This either means the monarch intervening in the market to keep completely fair competition or because a Monarchy is able to ensure the protection of the free market capitalist system with more stability than other governance systems.

Monarcho-Distributism

Same as Monarcho
Capitalism, not great.

[NO QUOTE]

Monarcho-Distributism is an ideology that believes Distributism is best run with a monarch who would safeguard the nation, uphold its traditions and its central principles, such as subsidiarity.

Monarcho-Fascism

One of the worst monarchist ideologies, full stop.

"Everything within the crown, nothing outside the crown, nothing against the crown."

Monarcho-Fascism is a political system that combines monarchical rule with the authoritarian structures, governance styles, and aesthetics commonly associated with Fascism. Under Monarcho-Fascism, a king, queen, or similar sovereign exercises centralized, autocratic control, suppresses political opposition and dissent, and often imposes state oversight or direction over the economy and society.

Monarcho-Socialism

Honestly, this is probably the best monarchist ideology.

However, it's still not great since it depends on if it's just a ceremonial monarchy or not.

"Workers of the world, embrace monarchy!"

Monarcho-Socialism is an ideology that believes that the Monarch's role is inherently a public one due to the Monarch having a parental obligation to his state. This can take many forms from absolute monarchism to a constitutional monarchy where the king as the leader of the revolution in most cases, instead preferring to have the monarch as the constitutional head of state while the socialist government does the politicking.

Monarcho-Syndicalism

Opposing democracy, cringe

"Long live the king! Long live the union!"

Monarcho-Syndicalism is an ideology that advocates for a monarchy with a strong focus on unionizing the workers while opposing democracy.

Monetarism

I don't have an economics degree so i'm just gonna say this doesn't sound great as it mentions 'market distortion' a term used by capitalists to decry welfare and subsidies.

"Stop the presses! When the second coming of Friedman returns so shall they!"

Monetarism is an ideology that believes that the government's primary role in the economy should be monetary policy with the goal of keeping inflation under control. Specifically, he thinks that there should be a very low inflation rate (1%-3%), and he wants this to be as stable as possible, since it being stable eliminates the market distortion both non-stable inflation/deflation brings. In modern times, several Monetary Authorities, notably Former Federal Reserve Chair and Nobel Prize winner Ben Bernanke, have been monetarists. Monetarist policies were used by Bernanke during the 2008 Great Recession with expansion of QE (Quantitative Easing) and the overall expansion of Money Supply.

Multiculturalism

1 75% agree with this one, cultures other than a nation's dominant one should be accepted however with two caveats.

For practical purposes, the native language should be encouraged to be learned.

Secondly, the less tolerant aspects of an ideology, (The bigoted parts of religions, inherent sexism in some cultures) should be phased out via the exposure of people to the benefits of a socially liberal society.

"Diversity is our strength!"

Multiculturalism generally shortened to Multikulti is an internationalist ideology that seeks to create the complete co-habitation of every culture within every area of life.

Mutualism

Anarchism isn't great, I said that before.

Also, having workers own just the banks is bizarre, I don't think companies would be happy borrowing money from a hyper-cooperative bank.

"Orange was the first black"

Mutualism is an ideology that advocates for a socialist system based on a free market economy and the introduction of a mutual credit bank, ownership of the means of production by either the workers collectively or by the individuals using them, and the representation of trade by equal amounts of labour in the free market.

Nacionalismo

Bad, go into the bigot corner.

¡Viva Argentina!

Nacionalismo is an ideology that came out of a resurgence of Traditionalism and nostalgia for Feudalism in the early 1910s. It became a powerful and significant force in Argentine politics in the 1930s. Nacionalismo supports Authoritarianism, Traditionalism, Corporatism, militant catholicism and support of the landed gentry. They despised Liberalism, Socialism, Freemasonry, Feminism, Jews and foreigners. It believes that Liberalism and Democracy are the prelude to Marxism.

National Agrarianism

Agriculture is important, but not enough to base society around it.

This is also worse than regular Agrarianism since it has a nice dash of nationalism.

"Gotta get rid of them varmints!"

National Agrarianism is an ideology appealing to rural communities and believing that agriculture and farmers are an important part of a country and national identity, synthesizing ideas of Nationalism and Agrarianism.

National Anarchism

Anarchism AND racism...

Yikes-

"MY NATION DOESN'T NEED A STATE!"

National Anarchism is an ideology, it believes that autonomous communes that should be run by a Mutualist economic system in addition to traditional and Reactionary social views and should be segregated ethnically and/or culturally, with the addition of a Meritocratic social system. However, some followers believe that these beliefs should be decided by the community itself.

National Bolshevism

What the f-ck?

How do you combine two terrible ideologies that both hate each other, it's almost impressive.

There's also a small community that unironically subscribe to this ideology too, so that's fun.

"Nazbol Gang ASSEMBLE!"

National Bolshevism is an ideology which believes in the combination of bolshevik communism with ultranationalism, borrowing elements and aesthetics from fascism.

National Capitalism

Why is nato in the image?

Is this trying to say that nato is controlled by capitalists nazis or something? Tankie ass opinion.

Anyway, this ideology sucks and i find it amusing that the proponents of this often praise Henry Kissinger despite him being jewish.

"The market is free but (((they))) are not!"

National Capitalism is an ideology which blends Capitalism with some variety of Nationalism. Believing that capitalism is compatible with or should serve the national interest.

National Communism

Slightly better than the last one since it's not inherently bigoted, although it's still dangerous and way too extreme.

"Workers of Stanistan, unite!"

National Communism is an ideology that believes that marxism can be combined with nationalism which is mostly inspired by Marxism–Leninism. National Communism believes that class consciousness is best achieved through a shared national identity, as the capitalist tendency of "spatial planning" results in it being imperialist and/or globalist. Thus, the strong promotion of sovereignty will allow the workers of a nation to unite unaffected by capitalistic powers.

National Conservatism

I genuinely hate the right-wing dog whistle about the 'traditional family'.

Back in the era of the tradition family, men were allowed to beat their wives and give them lobotomies, doesn't seem great.

"FOR TRADITION AND STANISTAN!"

National Conservatism is an ideology who intends to preserve traditions, national and cultural identity as well as emphasising the protection of national interests. It carries a strict sense of law and order and is in favor of regulating immigration and values both the nation and the traditional family.

National Democracy

I understand why the polish are so militant since they were consistently screwed over by history.

However, that doesn't excuse the theocratic-ness, militancy and homophobia.

"Czotem Wielkiej Polsce!

This ideology is very complex, rundown on the left.

National Feminism

Bad and honestly, just bizarre.

I challenge you to find me one person who actually believes in this ideology.

"You're a Man or a Tr*nnny? TO ZE GAS CHAMBER!!!"

National Feminism is an ideology that has characteristics from Nazism such as anti-Semitism and ethnic cleansing of the "Untermensch". However, it is operated under the rule of women.

National Liberalism

This is actually a pretty good ideology, although regarding the economy, the capitalism is a bit too unrestrained for my liking.

Bonus points for being anti-islam.

"Liberté, égalité, patrie."

National Liberalism is an ideology that is generally supportive of welfare as well as being in favor of civil liberties on social issues such as LGBT rights, drug use, prostitution, pornography, euthanasia and abortion. European National Liberals generally have a special dislike for Islam, seeing many followers of it as terrorist sympathisers and opposed to "Western" concepts of Secularism and minority rights.

National Libertarianism

Libertarianism and Nationalist? Get out of here,
please.

"Globalism violates the NAP"

National Libertarianism believes that nationalism is not mutually exclusive with liberty but in fact required to attain what it terms "the most realistic, sustainable level of liberty". National Libertarianism believes that conflicts of interest caused by globalism and diversity leads to government tyranny.

National Primitivism

Admittedly, this is better than regular Nazism since primitive Nazis are easier to beat up.

"Mein Steinhelm ist zu schwer!"

National Primitivism is an ideology that believes that the advancement of technology has led to the degeneration of society and its people's culture. National Primitivism seeks to see its nation return to pre-industrial levels of technology.

National Radicalism

This one sucks a lot.

Even the anti-zionism is too much and for the wrong purpose.

Życie i śmierć dla narodu!”

(Life and death for the Nation!)

National Radicalism is anti-democratic. Since its creation, National Radicalism opposed both Capitalism and communism. However, its alternatives for both economic systems vary. National Radicalism was extremely anti-semitic, advocating for removing citizenship rights from Polish Jews, and called for the nationalization of Jewish owned companies. Nowadays, its radically anti-zionist. NOP party, for example, supports ending existence of Israel and returning Jerusalem under Pope's authority. Socially, National Radicals are: pro-life, anti-LGBT, anti-feminist and generally conservative. Many of them display Polish ultranationalist and even irredentist views, wanting to take back Kresy. The movement itself is strongly anti-immigrant, with their model of nationalism being the Christian one.

National Syndicalism

Shorten the quote i ain't reading all that.

But seriously, way too left-wing and also way too fascist at the same time.

"The sense of our idea is this: Destroying the principle that founded the modern economy, that imposed on nations the capitalist regime and subordinated all human values to the value of gold; to found a new economy which will be a national economy and which will judge all the institutions which grow from the economy in keeping with the guarantees they assure French blood."

National Syndicalism is an ideology that emerged from the tendency of revolutionary syndicalists to ally with integral nationalists. It opposes Capitalism, liberal democracy and, usually, Secularism. The ideology is usually associated with Fascism.

Nationalism

Since this is broad ideology, it can range from harmless to just being racist.

In general, I don't support nationalism, i think national identities just create more division between people rather than unity.

"What a wonderful day in Stanistan."

Nationalism is an ideology representing Nationalism in general without a specific country attached. It is a concept and movement advocating for the alignment of the nation's identity within the boundaries of the state. As a movement, it tends to promote the interests of a particular nation, especially with the aim of gaining and maintaining the nation's sovereignty over its perceived homeland to create a nation-state. It holds that each nation should govern itself, free from outside interference.

Nazi Transhumanism

Robot arms do not make racism better.

German science is the world's finest!

Nazi Transhumanism is an ideology which combines Nazism with Transhumanism. Like other fascist ideologies, it is considered culturally far right, but supports technological process.

Nazism

- > So-Called 'Master Race'
- > Devotes entire nation to the military
- > Fights 1 (one) war
- > Loses

Common Nazi L

"Ein Volk, Ein Reich, Ein Führer!"
Sieg Heil!"

National Socialism believes in a totalitarian state with a singular leader considered as embodying the state. Nazism opposes Communism and class-struggle, instead believing that the interests of the bourgeoisie and workers can be harmonized. Nazism believes fervently in racial purity and a racial hierarchy, though that is prone often to pragmatic and often contradictory changes. Groups which the Nazis consider as subhumans often included Jews, Slavs, Romani, Africans, the disabled, and others. Nazism believes that Jews are behind the supposed degeneration and destruction of the nation and behind ideologies that he opposes such as "Judeo-Bolshevism", liberalism, "Judeo-Capitalism" globalism and democracy. After the end of Nazi rule in Germany, Nazism was reduced to a fringe movement which now manifests itself as Neo-Nazism, a loosely connected movement with various beliefs, but which commonly manifests as a belief in White supremacy and hatred towards Jews, blacks, and other groups considered to be inferior

Necrocracy

Insane idea, obviously.

However, I do find it funny that North Korea actually is like this, albeit in just an official capacity.

"When there is no more room in Hell, the dead will become president"

Necrocracy is a form of government which is run by the dead (how exactly varies on the variants). An example of a Necrocracy is in North Korea and historically the chanka culture, in Peru.

Neo-Bolshevism

Since this is from 1984, It's obviously a terrible idea.
The anthem is awesome tho.

“Эгоизм - это последний вздох капитализма!”

(Egoism is the last gasp of capitalism!)

Neo-Bolshevism is the doctrine of the superstate of Eurasia in George Orwell's 1984. Little is known about its beliefs, but given the name, it can be assumed it has something to do with Marxist Communism. While Ingsoc is the corruption of English Socialism, and Death Worship is the corruption of Asian spirituality and self-sacrifice, NeoBol is a corruption of Communism to serve the interests of the state.

The description of this is rather vague and verbose, but i guess it seems okay.

The likes section doesn't seem okay tho.

Kantian Philosophy

Corporate-Party democracy

Veritas, Ordo, Libertas, Sapientia.

Neo-Enlightenment philosophy is built on four key principles:

Veritas - The pursuit of objective truth, guided by rational thought,

Ordo - The concept of order, where related elements form a balanced structure, without intentional design.

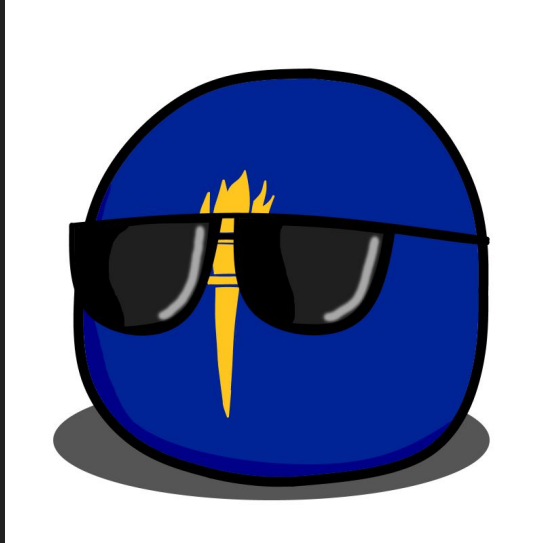

Libertas - Liberty as the foundation of ethics, morals, and politics.

Sapientia - Wisdom, which involves both theoretical and practical reasoning, grounded in rationality and consistency.

Neo-Libertarianism

Just like normal Libertarianism, this one isn't great. Negative rights are necessary to safeguard others.

Obviously i'm sure Neo-Libertarians don't believe muder should be legal, but even stuff like deregulating companies would infringe on the right of the consumer to have affordable prices, as deregulation allows companies to price gouge.

"Liberty is non-negotiable"

Neo-Libertarianism is an ideology that stems from the concept that negative rights are largely incompatible with a strictly limited government, and thus, he is generally supportive of government involvement in society as long as it "promotes greater liberty"

Neo-Marxism

Marxism is too far-left for me, so this doesn't really make it more palatable to me.

"Free election of masters does not abolish the masters or the slaves."

Neo-Marxism is an ideology that seeks to incorporate new elements from other intellectual traditions into classical Marxism, such as psychoanalysis, critical theory, and sometimes existentialism. Broadly speaking Neo Marxism incorporates Max Weber's understanding of social inequality into Marxist Philosophy.

Neo-Ottomanism

Bad, stinky even.

The Ottoman Empire was an authoritarian theocracy that has no place in the modern world.

"Türkiye'yi Yeniden Osmanlı İmparatorluğu Yapın!"

(Make Turkey Ottoman Empire Again!)

Neo-Ottomanism is an ideology that promotes greater political engagement of the Republic of Türkiye with former Ottoman territories and a revival of Ottoman culture and tradition.

Neocameralism

This one sucks too, running a country like a business is always a bad idea.

[NO QUOTE]

Neocameralism is a form of government proposed by the Neoreactionary writer Mencius Moldbug, largely inspired by the economic system in place under the Prussian King, Frederick the Great. Neocameralism is a Monarchical system as enforced by the framework of the corporate joint-stock model that can be seen in the most companies in the western countries. In short, it believes a large joint-stock corporation should be chosen as rulers of a country, and the corporation's shareholders should choose a "Monarch-CEO"

Neoconservatism

While NATO is great, i think the ideology it's attached to sucks so much.

There was no legitimate reason to invade iraq, all it did was destabilize an entire region of the world.

"If you want peace, prepare for war!"

Neoconservatism is a branch of conservatism originating in the United States during the 1960s that favors a broadly interventionist foreign policy. Neoconservatism typically advocates the promotion of democracy and interventionism in international affairs, including peace through strength (by means of military force), and is known for espousing disdain for communism and other forms of political radicalism.

Neoliberalism

Thankfully, Neoliberalism gets a lot of flack nowadays unlike the 2000s.

The whole free markets thing and rapid globalisation sucks.

Globalisation can be good if it's done slowly and without the inclusion of countries that don't have fully developed labour watch dogs yet, I am certain that globalisation has increased slavery in the third world.

"Free trade, open borders, taco trucks on every corner."

Neoliberalism is an ideology that commonly supports atlanticist foreign policy and economic globalization. although there is general disagreement on what exactly the term means on both the left and the right.

Neoluddism

While i do agree with this a small amount, i think industrialisation was in the end, necessary for the progression of society, despite its drawbacks.

Also, having a quote from a domestic terrorist in your ideology isn't a great look.

"The Industrial Revolution and its consequences have been a disaster for the human race"

Neoluddism is a political philosophy that vehemently rejects Techno-Industrial society and the widespread reliance on advanced technology. It argues that the Industrial Revolution and its aftermath have been catastrophic for humanity, leading to environmental destruction, psychological distress, social alienation, and the erosion of individual autonomy. Modern technological systems, according to Neoluddites, have replaced meaningful human connections with impersonal and oppressive structures that prioritize efficiency and control over human well-being. Advocates of Neoluddism call for the dismantling of these systems and a return to simpler, agrarian lifestyles based on preindustrial tools and methods.

Neoreactionaryism

This one sucks, obviously.
It reeks of the whole 'I was born in the wrong
generation' thing that edgy teenagers say.

"Have you even read Moldbug?"

Neoreactionaryism is an ideology that opposes Democracy, Egalitarianism and the idea that the progress of history leads to liberty and enlightenment and the abolition of absolutism in favor of democracy and/or constitutional monarchy, considering itself the antithesis of Enlightenment Thought. It is in favor of the re-adoption of systems of governance such as Absolute Monarchy and Cameralism. Neoreactionaryism

Neosocialism

This one is still too extreme. While it's better than Marxism, it's still normally anti-democratic.

Also, this one is listed as being influenced by 'catholic fascism', so that doesn't sound good either.

"Liberty, Equality, Fraternity, Work, Family & Fatherland."

Neosocialism was a political faction that gradually distanced itself from Marxism and reformist socialism. Instead, it advocated for an Authoritarian, Corporatist, and Class-collaborationist regime which would bring about a revolution from above, which they referred to as a constructive revolution.

Neozapatismo

God dammit, this was so close to being great but the whole Confederatism and more importantly, Armed Insurgency

Hand in your weapons and then it will be near perfect.

Banger song tho

"Aquí manda el pueblo y el gobierno obedece."

Neo-Zapatismo is not an ideology or doctrine but a set of political philosophies and practices inspired by Emiliano Zapata, though certain aspects of Neozapatismo can be identified as, Armed insurgency, National and international networks of solidarity, Indigenous liberation, Alter-Globalism, Indigenous Feminism, Confederatism, and Direct Democracy.

Noocracy

This is worse than meritocracy because at least meritocracy could be somewhat measured with stuff like grades and degrees.

With this one, you have to define 'knowledge', the most broad and vague quality someone can have.

"Only the biggest of the big brain will rule."

Noocracy is a system of government within which authority is delegated to people based on their knowledge, those people traditionally being philosophers and theologians. Unlike meritocracy, which rewards quantifiable achievements such as academic performance, career success, or technical expertise, noocracy centers on less easily measurable traits: wisdom, ethical insight, and philosophical depth. While meritocracy may rely on standardized benchmarks, noocracy operates on the belief that those who deeply understand the human condition, natural order, or spiritual truth are best equipped to guide society.

Nordic Model

This one is very good, I wouldn't include it in my list of personal ideologies, but it's close to it.

Even if i disagreed with it, it's worth looking at the Nordic countries as they are the happiest and have the highest quality of life. [Statistically]

Börk, I'm not a socialist

The Nordic Model's economic system is market capitalism with a large welfare state and a neo-corporatist bargaining system, while also having a parliamentary form of government.

Objectivism

I know it sounds a bit extreme, but that quote just sounds downright selfish when you strip away the fancy words.

The world would be a cold and dark place if no one helped each other.

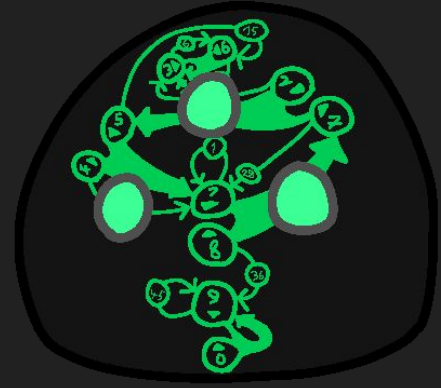

"I swear by my life and my love of it that I will never live for the sake of another man, nor ask another man to live for mine."

Objectivism is a philosophy of author and philosopher Ayn Rand. On political matters, objectivists favour free market capitalism and the opposition to statism.

Occult Post-Humanism

Not sure if this counts as an ideology but if it's just a group that talks about cybernetic stuff, then it's fine I guess.

[NO QUOTE]

Occult Post-Humanism is the ideology of the Ccru, an organization formed at the university of Warwick, which existed from 1995 till 2003. The Ccru can be defined as a collective whose main topic of theorizing and production is cybernetic cultures

Ochlocracy

Terrible ideology, It may sound anti-democratic, but sometimes what the majority want is completely insane and unreasonable.

*“THE MOB WANTS YOU TO BE

Ochlocracy believes that direct democracy and majoritarianism should be enforced through extreme violence. Ochlocracy also believes that all actions are okay if they are approved by the majority in any scenario, including assault, theft, rape, vandalism and murder.

Obviously, this ideology sucks, although many would be in favour of this if it was them in control.

"By the few, not the many."

Oligarchy is a political system where a small group of individuals are the collective rulers, usually indirectly through lobbying a head of state, though this group can rule directly in some cases. This group may or may not be distinguished from the masses by one or several traits such as age and/or wealth.

One-Nation Conservatism

As a british person, fuck the tories, a slight sprinkling of 'social programs' won't change that.

"Building a country that works for everyone."

One-Nation Conservatism is an ideology that advocates the preservation of established institutions and traditional principles within a political democracy, combined with economic and social programs that benefit the working class. It believes that society develops in an organic way instead of engineering. Founded by UK Prime Minister, Benjamin Disraeli in the 1840s. After the post-war consensus in 1945, it became the prominent ideology of the Conservative Party up until the leadership of Margaret Thatcher in the late 70s, which moved the party towards Neoliberalism.

Optimateism

Bad, get your classist ass out of here.

"A Righteous Ideology!"

Optimateism is an ideology rooted in the philosophical and political traditions of the Optimate faction of the Roman Republic. The Optimates championed the supremacy of the senatorial class and sought to uphold the power of the traditional Roman elite against the populist reforms advocated by the Populares. Adherents of Optimateism idealize the societal hierarchies and institutional structures of ancient Rome, emphasizing a rigid class system, the preservation of aristocratic privileges, and the concentration of power in the hands of a ruling elite. They argue that such a framework ensures stability, continuity, and order, resisting the destabilizing effects of Demagoguery, Egalitarianism, and widespread political enfranchisement.

Ordo-Liberalism

Better than Classical Liberalism, but it still isn't great, Liberal economics are pretty bad.

"Einigkeit und Recht und Freiheit!"

Ordo-Liberalism is an ideology which is the combination of Liberalism and Social Capitalism. It can be defined as in-between the more laissez-faire approach of Classical Liberalism and the slightly more paternalistic approach of Modern Liberalism.

Orthodox Theocracy

Like every theocracy, this sucks.

"So, read the Fathers, even one or two lines a day.
They are very strengthening vitamins for the soul."

Orthodox Theocracy is an ideology that believes in combining the social and political power of government with Orthodox Christianity

Pacifist Feminism

No war or sexism, sounds good.

"No war, no sexism"

Pacifist Feminism is an ideology that advocates for pacifism and full equality between men and women.

Pagan Theocracy

Like all theocracies, this one sucks.

"I have a god for everything! Yes, even a god of lemons!"

Pagan Theocracy is an ideology that wants paganism to be the ruling religion over the community. In state societies, this usually manifests itself in extreme authoritarianism and while may somewhat vary, often will execute those who have a different interpretation of pagan beliefs. However in tribal societies it often is extremely libertarian, varies greatly among practitioners of different areas, is generally much less statist, and is usually more of a structure of social taboos to ensure the survival of the tribe and was "more or less" decided by the people of said tribe, whether it be through democratic vote and/or traditional societal roles such as elders or chiefs who often either were elected by the tribe and/or were given such power via tradition.

Paleoconservatism

That theme song is the most country thing ever.

Anyway, this ideology is terrible is currently the driving force behind much of the attacks on human rights in America right now, so forgive me if i'm somewhat biased against praising the lord while also spreading hate.

"AMERICA FIRST!"

Paleoconservatism is a political ideology that originated in the United States and supports heavy restrictions on immigration, Decentralization, Isolationism, and a return to traditional ethics & morals relating to gender, culture, and society. This includes opposition to abortion, gay marriage, LGBT rights, etc.

Paleolibertarianism

Holy shit, that theme song was insane and i kinda love it.

Despite that, this ideology is terrible and is the rural variant of the last ideology.

"Don't tread on my Judeo-Christian Values."

Paleolibertarianism is an ideology which stresses inherent incompatibility between cultural progressivism and the concept of liberty, as well as a focus on the importance of inherited culture as a means of maintaining order. Paleolibertarianism is distinguished by a particular opposition to all types of state interventionism, especially Foreign and Economic.

Patchwork

While giving every single city its own country does sound like a good idea for representation, this would inevitably end up with people being even more divided than they are right now, imagine having to pass through a border checkpoint to leave your city.

"Every city a state"

Patchwork is a political ideology that seeks the maximum possible increase in City-States and Microstates in general, Ideally seeing a world in which every locality is its own sovereign state.

Pan-Nationalism

While this isn't as ideal as a single world state, Pan-Nationalism is a step in the right direction as long as it isn't based off race and instead off culture or geography.

"We should unite as one!"

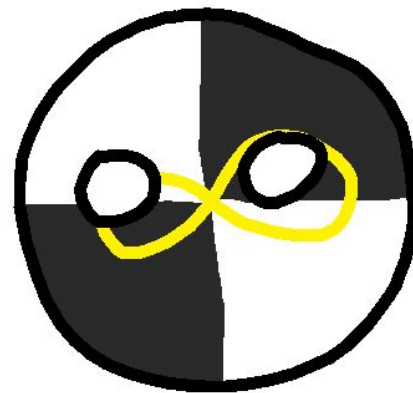

Pan-Nationalism is an ideology that believes in transcending traditional boundaries of basic national identities, in order to create a pan-national identity, based on various common denominators. This pan-national identity could be a certain ethnicity, race, religion, geographical area, or a language.

Pan-Nationalism differs from Irredentism in a sense that irredentism envisions the annexation of independent states or some of their territories under its rule while PanNat regards a union of two or more sovereign states that share a common feature.

Panarchism

Considering how messed up the 'free market', this wouldn't be a great idea.

This would likely end up with only 5 governments all milking taxes (profits) from their citizens.

"No this has nothing to do with pansexuality."

Panarchism is an ideology that believes that the populace should have the right to choose the form of government that they live under.

It is the idea that every part of a certain country or group of lands should be led by voluntary associations of people and free competition of form of governments, similar to the competition of private firms on the market. People could associate and disassociate from different governments depending on their preferences.

Parliamentarianism

I'm biased [british], but this is preferable to a US style system, why the hell is there a senate AND house, there is no need for two separate legislative bodies.

Bonus points for spitting image as the theme song.

"The parliament will decide your fate."

Parliamentarianism is a political ideology which seeks the dominance of a legislative body in the matters of sovereignty.

There are two types of parliamentary democracies:

Westminster system - Modeled after the UK system, these parliaments have debates that are adversary more often than not. The plenary sessions are more important than committees. Nations with this model have traditionally used first-past-the-post for elections.

Consensus system - Unlike the Westminster system, committees are more crucial than plenary sessions. The debates are utilized to reach a consensus. Countries with a consensus system are more likely to use proportional representation.

Participism

This one sounds complicated but since it's libertarian socialist, i'll say it's at least tolerable.

"In a society, we all participate"

Participism is a political philosophy that believes that in an alternative to both capitalism and centrally-planned state socialism. It believes in participatory politics and economics. There are two political systems in Participism: participatory politics and participatory economics.

Participatory politics is a political system that complement participatory economics in a way that both make up Participism. The main values of this political system is freedom, tolerance, self-management, solidarity and justice. The goal of this system is to allow people to participate as much as they could in a manner that is face-to-face.

Participatory economics is an economic system that is based on participatory decision making in the economic mechanism as their primary allocation. They say that decision making in the system of participatory economics can impact an individual or a group of individuals. Participatory economics is more of a decentralized planned economy, which involves the ownership of the means of production. Participatory economics is proposed to be an alternative to Capitalism and centrally-planned socialism.

Particracy

Although they can occasionally facilitate corruption, political parties are required so voters can tell what a candidate stands for.

To use a british example, a labour candidate is likely to maintain or increase welfare, while a conservative candidate is likely to burn the homeless in the streets.

"THE PARTY WOULD LIKE TO REMIND YOU-"

Particracy is a government system in which political power is concentrated within political parties. The term is usually a pejorative against representative democracies in which the representatives are not seen as actually representing their constituents or those who voted for them but rather the interests of the political parties they belong to.

Paternalism

While this ideology can be taken way too far, some level of social direction is needed to make sure people stay empathetic to each other.

[NO QUOTE]

Paternalism is a social and political philosophy emphasizing positivity in the government having a role in nudging people towards the right direction. Paternalist policy is defined as government action or sometimes any form of institutional exercise of power which limits an individual's or group's autonomy that is intended for their own good.

Paternalistic Conservatism

While this ideology's economics is okay, the social ideas aren't great, it's in the name.

If everyone did what their father did because 'he knows best', then there would be zero social change and we'd still be sacrificing our first born sons to the volcano gods.

"Father knows best!"

Paternalistic Conservatism is an ideology which combines social conservatism with economic interventionism. Paternalistic Conservatives support neither the individual nor the state in principle, but are instead prepared to support either or recommend a balance between the two depending on what is most practical thus making them civically moderate.

Patriarchy

Bad, go into the bigot corner
Seriously though, this is a borderline medieval ideology and perspective to have.

"Don't smash on me, Feminist!"

Patriarchy is any form of governance in which political power is concentrated among men. However, since the beginning of the women's liberation movement, it has taken on a derogatory meaning by describing an undesirable society characterized by the overbearing representation of men and male privilege.

Patriotism

A small amount of patriotism is fine for a country, but it gets dangerous when it veers into nationalism.

Basically, you can love your country, just don't start advocating for the downfall of others.

"God bless Stanistan!"

Patriotism is an idea of respect, attachment, and veneration for one's own nation. It is less extreme and distinct from Nationalism, largely in the way that Patriotism doesn't necessarily call for any actions to be taken to ensure sovereignty or dominance.

Peronism

Philosophical Anarchism

Like every other type of anarchism, this one sucks but this one is also pretentious too.

[NO QUOTE]

Philosophical Anarchism is an Anarchist school of thought which holds that the state lacks moral legitimacy whilst not supporting violence to eliminate it.

Physiocracy

This ideology is just outdated. Not to sound rude but the only countries that have most of their wealth from agriculture aren't exactly the most wealthy countries anyway.

[NO QUOTE]

Physiocracy is an ideology which believes that wealth of nations stems primarily from land agriculture, development, and agricultural labour, causing it to have an important emphasis on productive work as the source of national wealth.

Pink Capitalism

This is a terrible idea. Even if 'complete sexual promiscuity' is assumed as a good thing, the theory that the desire of profit supersedes that of culture is completely wrong.

There are hundreds of examples of public or political backlash forcing companies to back down from progressive policies.

"Fisting is $300"

Pink Capitalism's main belief is that completely unregulated capitalism will result in a culture of complete sexual promiscuity, total drug acceptance, and empowerment of ethnic minority groups since the profit coming from the economic relationships with these minorities is bigger than the desire of preservation of culture, eventually leading towards complete acceptance of these people.

Pinochetism

Sorry but you can't just throw people you disagree with out of helicopters, go to therapy.

"Helicopter rides – 100% free discount for leftists and commies!"

Pinochetism is an ideology that heavily opposes any kind of economic leftism as well as the people who believe in those kinds of ideologies.

Piratism

Based af, with the 'Online Safety Act' coming into force in the UK, I think it's important to remind people that this lack of regulation ideology only applies to small websites.

When corporate level regulations are applied to tiny websites, bad stuff happens.

"Aaaarrrr! We 'ave looted some booty on the internet."

Piratism is an ideology that is driven by the push for comprehensive copyright reform or even the abolition of copyright laws altogether. Rooted in the principles of government transparency, freedom of speech, and personal privacy, it seeks to create a society where information flows freely and without unnecessary restrictions. Strongly aligned with the ideals of the digital age, Piratism champions digitalization and the use of e-government to streamline governance and empower citizens through technology. Central to its ideology is a staunch opposition to government regulation of the Internet, viewing such controls as threats to free expression, creativity, and the open exchange of ideas. By challenging traditional concepts of intellectual property and advocating for open access to knowledge, Piratism envisions an internet and society unburdened by corporate monopolies or governmental overreach, adapting societal structures to the realities of the information era.

Platformism

Anarchy is bad, something that I've said 1000 times before here.

While this is slightly less anarchist, It's still much too anarchist for my taste.

"Power breeds parasites. Hail Anarchy!"

Platformism is an ideology that seeks unity from its participants, having, as a defining characteristic, the idea that each platformist organization should include only people that are fully in agreement with core group ideas, rejecting people who disagree. It stresses the need for tightly organized anarchist organizations that are able to influence working class and peasant movements.

Plutocracy

~~[America be like]~~

Obviously this is a bad idea, having a ton of money doesn't give you the abilities to lead a country.

"If we're able to become billionaires, we might as well run the government."

Plutocracy is a form of government that is controlled by the rich and wealthy, Plutocracy comes from capitalist theory, believing in a system based on wealth and rule by the upper wealthy class.

Pol Potism

Jesus fucking christ.

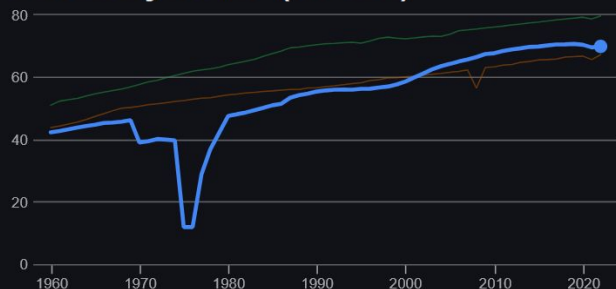

I'm actually impressed with the level of genocide Pol Pot carried out.

Even if we ignore the genocide, the whole anti-intellectual belief is something a super villain would believe in.

Below is the only graph that you need to see around this ideology.

Cambodia / Life expectancy

69.90 years (2022)

“សូមអនុមោទនាថ្ងៃទី ១៧ ខែមេសា ខាងមុខនេះ !”

“('Long live the glorious 17th of April!’)”

Pol Potism is an ideology formulated by Saloth “Pol Pot” Sar. Pol Pot's regime carried out the Cambodian genocide against ethnic and religious minorities such as Vietnamese people, political opponents, and intellectuals.

Police Statism

While i do advocate for mild amounts of authoritarianism, this is way too much.

I think if a state needs a secret police force to keep its people compliant, then it is a failed state.

"In some ways, my job is like a garbage man. How I take out the trash."

Police Statism is a form of government that exercises power through police force. The inhabitants of a police state may experience restrictions on their mobility, or on their freedom to express or communicate political views, which are subject to police monitoring or enforcement. Political control may be exerted by means of a secret police force that operates outside the boundaries normally imposed by a constitutional state.

Populareism

I know Imperialism is a buzzword nowadays, but this is imperialism in its purest form, a selfish and hateful mind set.

"For the plebs!"

Populareism is an ideology that shares the beliefs of the Populares faction in the Roman Republic. The populares were also noted for being among the most imperialistic faction in the Roman republic and were certainly not opposed to flexing Roman muscle and would often push for waging war and establishing new colonies.

Populism

While populism is often misused by those in power.

[cough cough]

Populism can be a great tool for change in the right circumstances, provided it truly represents the population's views.

"Our ruler is law, and the law is our own!"

Populism is an ideology that focuses on appealing to a large amount of people and their sensibilities, believing that what the masses want must be what the masses get.

Posadism

This is so insane I almost love it, It's like a faction you'd encounter in fallout or something.

Taking it in seriousness, though, this is insane and dangerous as hell to believe.

"THIS is what true communism has always meant to be, the rest of them are weak, but not me, I am willing to sacrifice billions for the new utopia."

Posadism is an ideology that holds the belief that socialism can only be achieved after the collapse of society after a global nuclear war. It also believes that socialist alien civilizations with advanced technology exist, and will help humanity rebuild earth into a utopia after the nuclear collapse and that humans can communicate with dolphins and probably other animals too, saying that work in the area would lead to "the harmonization of human relations with nature"

Positive Christianity

What the actual fuck?

I'm not religious at all but doesn't a part of the bible denounce this? (Galatians 3:28)

The verse is still very cult-like, but it still does denounce this, facts have never stopped nazis before, though.

"Ein Volk, Ein Reich, Ein Führer, Eine Kirche!"

(One Folk, One Realm, One Leader, One Church!)

Positive Christianity was a movement inside the Weimar Republic and Third Reich that sought to combine Christian values with the Nazi Party. Politically, it had the goal of imposing a nazified form of Christianity with a Protestant theocracy controlled by the state. During World War II the main figure in the creation of Positive Christianity, Alfred Rosenberg, postulated a vision for the future of religion in Germany which included the expulsion of what he called "foreign Christian religions", the replacement of the Bible with Mein Kampf and the replacement of crosses with swastikas in new Nazified churches.

Post-Anarchism

This is weird as hell, I can't really understand what the description is trying to say.

Despite that, it does say insurrection which is just as bad and violent as a revolution, so I'm not a fan of this.

La connaissance n'est pas pour savoir, la connaissance est pour collaborer.

Post-Anarchism is anarchism understood not as a certain set of social arrangements or even as a particular revolutionary project, but rather as a sensibility, a certain ethos or way of living and seeing the world which is impelled by the realization of the freedom that one already has. It suggests that revolution – as a way of thinking about radical political changes – is no longer operational, and proposes the notion of insurrection instead – in which one distances oneself from power, rather than seeking to fight against it directly creating a new rule.

Post-Colonial Anarchism

Like all anarchism, this one sucks.

The solution to post-colonial unrest isn't to just splinter into thousands of communes, that would make it worse.

[NO QUOTE]

Post-Colonial Anarchism is an ideology that encourage separation from oppressive state/colonial structures via anarchism.

Post-Humanism

I think this could be good in the very far future, but not now.

Technology is nowhere near advanced enough to provide the benefits of transhumanism while eliminating the risk.

Also, the whole hive mind vibes this gives off is rubbing me the wrong way.

"if (people.find("Nick Land").based == true) {this.become(fullRobot);};"

Post-Humanism is an ideology that believes in trans-human enhancement (elimination of aging, immortality and greatly enhanced intellectual, physical, and psychological capacities). As a consequence of this, humans will cease to be human to become post-humans.

Post-Industrialism

Honestly, this is a good thing. Service economies often have better standards of living than industrial economies.

Also, cutting down on carbon emissions is much easier in a service economy, as you don't have to make some miracle technology that absorbs all the pollution from industrial factories.

[NO QUOTE]

Post-Industrialism is a technological and social stage of development in which the economic output of manufacturing is surpassed by the economic output of the service sector. It is distinguished by a technological focus on electronics and communication technologies as opposed to analogue technologies and heavy machinery of Industrialism.

Post-Leftism

Again, anarchism is bad, opposition to organised religion is great. The anti-discrimination is also good.

Also, the whole anti-work movement is a very mixed bag. I share a lot of their beliefs but I think abolishing all 'involuntary work' is a terrible idea. Name more than 2 people you know you WANT to clean sewers.

"The natural conclusion of organised authority is individual triumph."

Post-Leftism is an ideology that critiques the mainstream left from a more radical viewpoint and accepts many classical left-anarchist beliefs, like opposition towards all forms of government, organized religion and discrimination, with some post leftists even rejecting classical anarchist forms of organization such as direct democracy as a means for anarchy, seeing it as another form of leviathan and oppression, and involuntary work.

Postcolonial Feminism

This is pretty good, the struggle of women in countries such as Saudi Arabia, India, Iran, etc are much more severe than those in developed nations, so any kind of attention drawn to it is good.

[Not downplaying the very real struggles that women in all nation go through, however]

"Don't care what people say, just follow your own way!"

Postcolonial Feminism is an ideology that criticizes the mainstream feminist movement, as it sees it as being focused entirely on women in the West. It analyzes how racism and the sociopolitical consequences of colonialism have affected women in postcolonial countries. It seeks to bring aspects of anti-racism, black feminism, and third world feminist movements into the mainstream, Western feminist movement. It opposes the use of the term "Women" as a single, universal group, as doing so causes women to only be categorized by their gender, and not their class, race or ethnicity.

Postgenderism

Okay, while making biological sex obsolete is somewhat extreme, I will admit that gender is mostly a social construct.

While people should still be able to have genders as it is a part of many people's identities, people should be able to forgo the entire concept and just be a person.

Think of it like being Asexual, for various reasons, someone can choose to just not participate in sexual activity. The gender version of this is someone just being non-binary or Agender.

Then again, i personally think gender is different for everyone, just like sexuallity.

"Cis-tem? I barely know 'em"

Postgenderism is an ideology that seeks to abolish the gender binary as it sees it as repressive and arbitrary. It not only wants to abolish social gender roles but also to make biological sex obsolete through transhumanism by using biotechnology and neurotechnology.

Presidentialism

While this isn't the worst form on government, having so much power in a single person gives them a lot of room to be corrupt or make terrible decisions

"Hail to the chief!"

Presidentialism is a form of government in which an individual who is both head of state and head of government leads the executive branch which is independent from the legislature. Another variant has both an executive president and separate parliamentary head of government co-exist, which is known as a Semi-Presidential System.

Primalism

Terrible idea, obviously.
I know there is the whole ironic 'return to monkey' meme, but it is simply in the realm of humour and fantasy.

"HGHHHH. GRRRGRRGH. GRRROWL. GROWL. GHHRHHG."

(Reject humanity, return to monkey.)

Primalism is an ideology that believes in the devolution of humanity into a more animalistic state. Primalism is so against human life that any sign of evolutionary development past base survive-or-die animal instinct is considered evil and must be punished.

Progressive Conservatism

While this is much better than regular Conservatism, it still isn't great, we don't need slow and gradual change when it comes to giving people their rights.

"They don't know that preserving traditions is progress, or at least, traditions are compatible with progress..."

Progressive Conservatism can refer to an ideology that supports social reform and change but emphasizes the necessity of progressing in a way that preserves traditions, and believes that instant change can be damaging to society so progress must occur slowly and gradually. This belief is often combined with the idea of a limited and obligatory government that only steps in when necessary. Progressive Conservatism can also manifest itself in beliefs such as that traditional values are compatible, or even complimentary with, the march to social equality.

Progressivism

Yeah, this is the good shit.
While I may not agree with the recreational usage of weed like in the profile image, basically everything else about Progressivism is perfect.

"Equality for All!"

Progressivism is an ideology which holds that the betterment of society can be attained by the destruction or dismantling of oppressive or repressive traditions along with advancements in science, technology, and social organization. Adherents believe that the ideal state for mankind is either inevitable or ought to be reached by choice.

Propertarianism

While people should have the right to own their own house, companies own properties or an individual owning multiple houses is ridiculous.

"This is my own private domicile and I will not be harassed, bitch!"

Propertarianism is a political ideology which reduces political philosophy to the respect of the right to private property, that is, reducing it to the explanation of the just distribution of scarce resources, and the just retaliation if this right is violated. It's an advocator of property, based on a principle which states that the only ways property can be legitimately obtained is either by mixing your labor with unowned resources or trading it, being gifted it by the previous owner, or by producing new property.

Protectionism

I agree only with the sub-ideology of this called Fair-Trade Protectionism, which is tariffs/sanctions on nations that produce goods via slavery, unsafe working conditions, etc.

If a nation is using these methods due to a lack of development, then economic aid should also be granted to create actual jobs.

He PROTECC, he ATTACC, but most importantly, he just wants our jobs BACC.

Protectionism is an ideology that believes that an economy of a nation should be protected against foreign influence for reasons that vary depending on who you ask. Generally, it is to promote and develop the local industry, so that foreign industry does not devour the local industry.

Protestant Theocracy

Theocracies are bad, no matter which religion or sub-religion it is.

"Long live the reformation!"

Protestant Theocracy is an ideology that believes that a theocracy should be established that's based on the beliefs of Protestantism.

Proutism

Oh shit, this one sounds awesome, it may be a bit utopian but other than that, this one is great.

[NO QUOTE]

Proutism is an ideology theorized in 1959. It opposes both Communism and Capitalism and advocates for a world government, locally governed and self-sufficient autonomous zones, a bill of rights for humans, plants, and animals, economic democracy, and an economy in which all goods are common property, and distributed in order to maximize the well-being of all living things.

Puzzle Piece Politics

This is a terrible idea. An ideology's description shouldn't include the word 'ideally'.

Also I think the nazi faction will tolerate being in the same area as basically anyone else.

"What do you mean this will cause a civil war?"

Puzzle-Piece Politics is an ideology that believes that the best way to deal with fringe ideologies is to give them pieces of land while still connecting them to the country. Ideally, this would lead to the fringe ideologies focusing on implementing their own ideology in their piece and bettering the people's lives, instead of fighting a civil war against each other.

Queer Anarchism

Holy shit, I normally don't like rap but this ideology's theme is fucking insane.

Anyway, Anarchism is bad but Queer Rights are great, since the stonewall memorial seems to have forgotten, I'm gonna remind everyone that stonewall was a riot and included all members of the Alphabet Mafia, not just the more mainstream palletable L and Gs.

"Be gay, do crime"

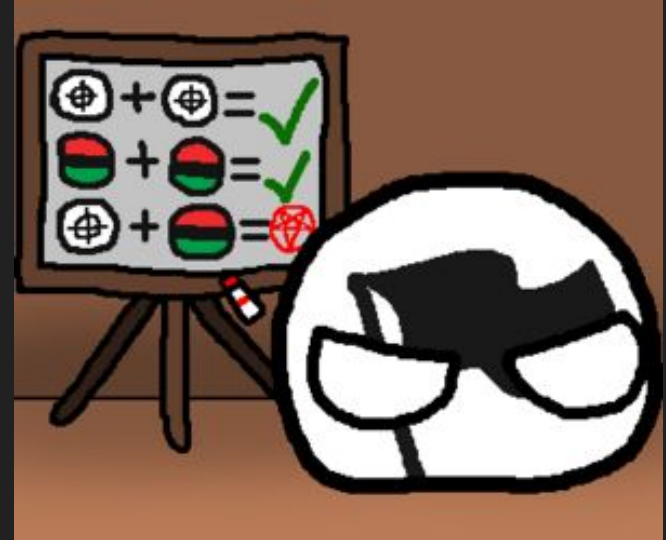

Queer Anarchism is a branch of Anarchism that places a special emphasis on the liberation of the LGBTQ community. Queer anarchists believe that the only true way to achieve such liberation is to launch a social revolution that will lead to the complete destruction of Capitalism, the state, and traditional hierarchies.

Racial Nationalism

I think the theme song just gave me a brain tumor.

I'm focusing on the song since the ideology itself should be obviously terrible.

I'm not sure if the song itself is satire but I find it funny that it misses the conclusion that everyone needs to work on their own inherited prejudice instead of just shrugging and going 'fuck it, everyone is racist and there's nothing we can do about it'

"If you mix a bold color of white with a bold color of black, all you're left with is a drab gray"

Racial Nationalism, instead of believing that nationality is based on common shared institutions and values, it believes that it's based on common race, and views it as the primary pillar of citizenship.

Radical Apoliticism

What the hell do you define as 'politics', isn't this just anarchism, demanding the abolishment of society?

"Listen to me, ideologies. I do not care about your praxis, I do not care about your theory, I only live to see you die!"

Radical Apoliticism is an ideology that wants the outright abolishment of politics.

Radical Centrism

This one does sound good, but when you think about it, it seems rather unstable.

Wouldn't a massive melting pot ideology have to employ double standards to at least some extent?

Also, merging ideologies is already a very unstable idea, let alone just 'shopping around'.

"Grocery shopping around the spectrum"

Radical Centrism is an ideology that advocates for radical change and measures with an emphasis on pragmatism over ideology. The essence of Radical Centrism can be described as something along the lines of "ideological grocery shopping". It uses policy positions from any ideology across the political spectrum in a non-partisan pragmatic way to solve individual issues with the fundamental goal of reforming institutions

Radical Democracy

OH FUCK YEAH, THIS ONE IS GREAT.

I think that liberal democracies have two fates, both depending on the people's apathy or lack thereof.

A slide into authoritarianism is the product of a population who has been either deceived or threatened into inaction.

However, a large amount of political participation will eventually bring about a direct democracy, even if it may take decades of reform to oust corrupt 'representatives'

"Start voting!"

Radical Democracy is a ideology that believes that the goal of democracy is to radically expand and extend all civil liberties. It also believes that democracy is a never-ending, perpetually unfinished process. It wants to pick up where the project of Liberal Representative Democracy left off, seeking to create more direct forms of political involvement that prioritize valuing disagreement and deliberation.

Radical Environmentalism

For legal reasons, i am obliged to say I do not support eco-terrorism... however

I don't see why people should be restricted to ignorable forms of protest, or be arrested for simply drawing attention to a literal civilization-threatening situation.

Blocking traffic is a valid form of protest, throwing milkshakes on oil barons and their puppets is a valid form of protest.

In dire situations even can be justified.

When it all goes down, can you say that you did everything you could?

"I am the Lorax, I speak for the trees.

Litter again, I'll break your fucking knees."

Radical Environmentalism represents an ideology distinct from mainstream Environmentalism, characterized by its advocacy for more extreme and direct measures to safeguard the natural world. Unlike conventional Environmentalism, which often focuses on policy reforms, sustainable practices, and incremental change, Radical Environmentalism is marked by its endorsement of direct action and civil disobedience as necessary tools for confronting and halting environmental degradation.

Radical Feminism

I'm pretty sure the theme song is making fun of feminism, but this ideology is okay.

While i think a complete transformation of society is a bit extreme, Feminism is a good view to have.

"For the liberation of the oppressed woman!"

Radical Feminism is a form of feminism that believes in a extreme transformation of modern society in order to eliminate patriarchal structures. Radical feminists believe that the current status quo is patriarchal in nature and is built upon the oppression of women. Thus, radical feminists believe that current society should be abolished and rebuilt based on the ideals of gender equality and women's rights. Historically, radical feminist movements have been culturally and economically left-wing, a they believed that Capitalism is inherently connected to the patriarchy. However, most modern radical feminist movements are neutral on economic issues.

Radicalism

Apart from being economically liberal, this ideology is great, i can't believe we have had three good ideologies in a row.

"I'm the most radical lib on the block!"

Radical Liberalism was a historical set of movements that represented the left-wing of Classical Liberalism. Radical liberalism took principles behind liberalism and applied them to their conclusion. For example, a classical liberal might espouse that a democratic system of government and the right to vote and free speech should be given. In turn, a radical liberal would take such a statement to its conclusion, that being that women, those without property, immigrants, slaves etc., should all be given the right to vote and express their opinions as long as they do not harm others. Radical liberals also supported positive rights whereas classical ones only advocated negative ones. Moreover, radical liberals were historically the early advocates of welfare states. By modern standards 'radicalism' is not radical at all, as the reforms made by radical liberals got accepted as the norm.

Reactionary Liberalism

This is basically the opposite of my political views, cringe.

"Reject modernity, embrace liberalism."

Reactionary Liberalism is an ideology who believes in a union of economic policies typical of liberalism and a democratic system of government with reactionary and traditionalist social values.

Reactionary Libertarianism

Stop saying random latin words, no one thinks it's smart.

Also, this ideology sucks.

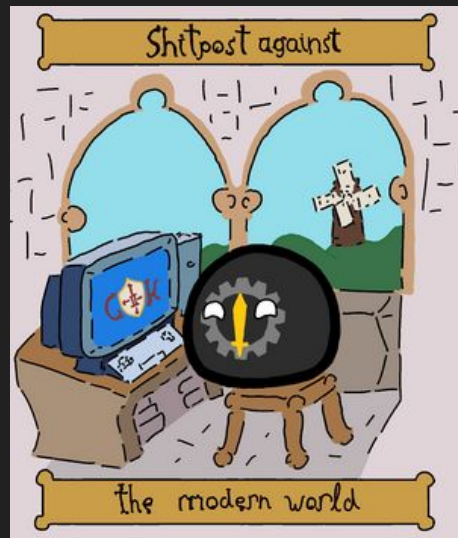

"Corpore remotum, it ita dicam."

Reactionary Libertarianism is an ideology inspired on the Belgian political philosopher, Frank Van Dun, who, in the article "The 'Reactionary' Libertarianism of Frank Van Dun", written by Richard Storey, is described as a "Reactionary Libertarian". The article shows extracts from Frank's correspondence with him outlining the case that the feudal system was stateless and that the church was, in fact, and contrary to most people's beliefs, the greatest limiter to the rise of states in Europe.

Reactionary Modernism

Isn't this just the ideology of 4Chan?

Again, all of these reactionary ideologies suck.

"There is no such thing as modernity in general. There are only national societies, each of which becomes modern in its own fashion."

Reactionary Modernism believes that the rejection of culturally liberal enlightenment values and the support of technological advancement are not contradictory but rather complementary.

Reactionary Socialism

Again, reactionary ideologies are bad, although this one is very very slightly better.

"Peasants of the Realm, conjoin!"

Reactionary Socialism is an ideology that is very close to Christian Socialism, Guild Socialism, and Monarcho-Distributism in policy, but is radically more traditionalist. Generally very decentralist.

Reactionaryism

Finally the last reactionary ideology on this list.

Good riddance.

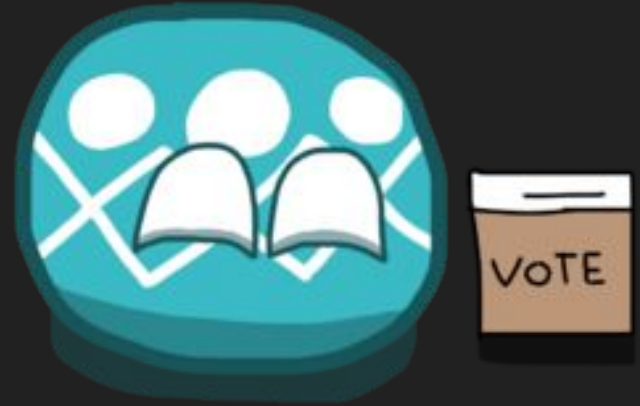

"Reject degeneracy, return to tradition!"

Reactionaryism is a philosophy that advocates for the restoration or preservation of traditional social, political, and economic systems. It is characterized by a rejection of progressive or liberal ideas and a belief that society has become too modern or innovative. Reactionaries argue that traditional values, such as order, tradition, and immaterialism; have been undermined or lost in modern society, and that a return to these values is necessary to restore social cohesion and stability. They also often argue that the Enlightenment, and the ideas and values associated with it, such as reason, individualism, and democracy; have had negative consequences for society, and that a return to pre-Enlightenment ways of thinking is needed. Reactionaries have a nostalgic view of the past and romanticize or idealize certain historical periods or social structures. They are hostile to social and cultural changes, such as the rise of secularism, gender equality, and the decline of traditional religions or cultural practices.

Reformism

This one is great, sadly the term reform has been hijacked by this dickhead in the UK.

"We need reform!"

Reformism is an ideology that advocates for the reform of an existing system or institution instead of its abolition and replacement.

Reformist Marxism

While this is much better than regular communism, I still think communism is much too extreme of a solution, I do respect this ideology for being the inspiration for democratic socialism however.

"Social Democracy is Socialist!"

Reformist Marxism is a type of Marxism which seeks to achieve communism through the use of reformist means. Reformist Marxism is the precursor of modern Democratic Socialism and Social Democracy, as well as Liberal Socialism. Reformist Marxism today is practiced by the Japanese Communist Party.

Regulationism

People hate paying taxes and businesses hate regulations, however both of these things are required so society continues not crumbling to dust.

"Oi, ye got a license for that page?"

Regulationism is the belief that the state should intervene within an established economic system to further a certain cause. These regulations can vary a lot and go from tax, import tariffs, zoning laws, labor laws, also extending to monetary policies such as the central bank controlling interest rates, etc.

Religious Anarchism

While this isn't exactly a theocracy, using religious reasons to implement any political ideology is bad.

Also, Anarchism bad.

"Only gods, no masters!"

Religious Anarchism is an ideology that believes in Anarchist views with a basis upon religion, usually manifesting in the belief that the only justified hierarchy is the hierarchy of God or other deities over mankind or that the glorification of the state is a sin as it constitutes idolatry.

Religious Feminism

Religion bad but this ideology is okay in itself.

If you really wanna insist on being religious, at least don't be sexist, i guess.

Also that theme song is beautiful.

"Yes of course, God is female!"

Religious Feminism is an ideology and movement that believes that religion is vital to a feminist viewpoint. It also have goals of making women figures being a part of the clergy and other religious authorities, as part of gender equality in religion.

Religious Nationalism

Using any religion as an excuse to glorify a nation state which your god likely did not even create is honestly just baffling.

Also, I think searching that theme song has put me on the EDL's recruitment list.

"God loves Stanistan!"

Religious Nationalism is an ideology that incorporates religion into nationalism. It seeks to use a shared religion to unite people under a national identity. It typically holds reactionary and intolerant views towards members of other religions, but not always. Religious nationalism is compatible with practically any religion, including Hinduism, Christianity, Islam, Judaism, Buddhism, etc.

Religious Rejectionism

This is one of the better religious ideologies, religion, being a belief based not upon logic but upon blind belief, has no place in politics.

"I just want to reach enlightenment, for God's sake."

Religious Rejectionism is an ideology that rejects politics for religious reasons. It can also represent religious people who are against involvement in politics for non-religious reasons.

Religious Socialism

Socialism is good, but the religious slant isn't.

Also, assuming this would be a theocracy, that's extra negative points.

"Socialists can be Religious too, right?"

Religious Socialism is an ideology that seeks to merge religious values with a socialist system, deeming it to be the most fitting of their given religion's charitable values

Religious Zionism

Oh boy, this one is not controversial at all.

No matter what religion it is, claiming land because your book says it's yours is illogical and borders on childish logic.

Also, watch this

"The Torah says we MUST have a state."

Religious Zionism is an ideology that states the Torah wills them to have state of their own, and wishes to combine mainstream Zionism and traditional Judaism practices.

Republicanism

Not to be confused with the Republic Party in the US, those guys suck.

This ideology is good, I'll happily join almost anyone fighting monarchism.

“Senatus Populusque Stanistananus”

Republicanism is an ideology centered on a system of government that is non-hereditary and opposed to Monarchism. Most of its views are dependent on context, varying from country to country. The only consistent trait has been hatred for monarchist systems.

Revisionist Maximalism

This is just a type of ethno-nationalism, bad.

"Conquer, or Die"

Revisionist Maximalism is an ideology which embraces the ideals of Fascism developed by Benito Mussolini in an attempt to construct a unified Jewish nationality rooted in radical Zionism, extreme militarism, anti-British and anti-Arab sentiment. It is opposed to communists, pacifists, humanists, globalists, and liberals.

Revisionist Zionism

Well yeah, Jewish people should be able to go to israel as a pilgrimage or just live there. The problem is that this ideology specifically advocates for an ethno-state founded on religious beliefs, which is bad.

"Equal rights for all! Welfare state! Iron wall!"

Revisionist Zionism is an ideology that believes that the Jews have the right to go back to the territory of Israel and Palestine.

Revolutionary Progressivism

I'm disturbed that this ideology has the same bad eye as me, but it's a coincidence i think.

Anyway, progressivism is good but i don't think it really helps the advancement of rights to attack those who are opposed to us, unless it's self-defense, obviously.

"There shall be no peace on Earth until every Reactionary in the world is dead!"

Revolutionary Progressivism is an ideology that believes in the radical restructuring of existing society through violent means in the vision of modern progressive ideals. The ideology ultimately sees that strict conservative cultural norms are holding back societies from developing into the modern era and that there is no point in preserving them.

Ricardian Socialism

This one is pretty good.
Although I do disagree that 'all wealth is from labour' since it's often unhelpful to make sweeping statements such as that.

*"ACTUALLY LABOR IS THE SOURCE OF ALL WEALTH BECAUSE-" *wall of text

Ricardian Socialism is an ideology that argues the Ricardian notion that labor is the source of all value and as such labor deserves all that it produces. Rent, profit, and interest in the view of this ideology are corruptive forces of the free market, not natural outgrowths of this system. Ricardian Socialists argue that the best way for a market society to function is one where associations of workers control the means of production, which is believed to eliminate the inherent inefficiency of a financial drain at the head of a company.

Right-Wing Populism

Wow, that song didn't age well.

Anyway, this fucking sucks. How the hell do you run a populist platform while pushing the exact same policies that the establishment is pushing?

"Make Stanistan Great Again!"

Right-Wing Populism is an ideology that is a rebranded version of National Conservatism combined with Populist rhetoric.

Rockefeller Republicanism

While this isn't great, It's a lot better than the regular republican party.

"The Military-Industrial Complex and its consequences have been a disaster for the american people"

Rockefeller Republicanism is an ideology stemming from a subgroup of the US Republican Party in the 1930s-1970s that held more moderate and liberal views on domestic issues than the rest of the party, similar to those of Nelson Rockefeller, former Governor of New York and Vice President.

Roman Republicanism

Despite being called a republic, the roman 'republic' was very authoritarian and unequal, like the description says.

I'm not saying that the roman empire that succeeded it was any better, but at least it was more open about its authoritarianism.

"SENATVS POPVLVSQVE ROMANVS"

Roman Republicanism is a system of government used by the Roman Republic prior to its succession by the Roman Empire. It was frequently authoritarian and had class divide into two groups, the plebs and the patricians.

Saadehism

The nationalisation of necessities is good, but basically everything else about this ideology sucks.

Mostly the suicide bombing, that's not good.

"We love life because we love freedom, and we love death when death is a path to life"

Saadehism is the ideology of the Syrian Social Nationalist Party which aims to unite the region of the Levant and Mesopotamia to create a centralized state within the geographical boundaries of the Fertile Crescent also referred to as Greater Syria. Saadeh is anti-Communist and anti Liberal Capitalist, advocating for an economic third position. Historically it has been a revolutionary ideology opposing European colonialism and Zionism, going as far as using suicide bombers against Israeli military targets. Economically, Saadeh believes that an economy based on production rather than services is more effective and calls for agrarian reform, and expansion of Industry. Generally, it supports private property, although it advocates for the nationalization of necessities.

Salazarism

Traditionalist dictatorship?

Bad

"Deus, Pátria, Família"

("God, Fatherland, Family")

Salazarism is an ideology with a strong emphasis in Imperialism and Catholicism that was the sole ruling ideology of the 2nd Portuguese Republic, a traditionalist corporatist dictatorship that ruled the country of Portugal and its imperial colonies from 1933 until the carnation revolution of 1974.

Satanic Theocracy

Non-Theistic Satanism is good, but this is way too extreme.

It doesn't really matter that what religion it is,
Theocracies suck.

"Better to reign in Hell, than to serve in Heaven."

Satanic Theocracy is an ideology which worships Satan and wants to establish a Theocracy of their religion. Those people and organisations that usually strive for some sort of theocracy tend to be culturally right and Authoritarian, the actual majority of practicing Satanists however tend to be progressives, and are often some form of left-wing.

Satirism

This one is way too broad to rate, it can mean both the most unfunny shit ever or spitting image.

"Please click on this link"

Political Satirism or just Satirism in the context of Polcompball is a ball representing a broad set of political personalities and/or parties that run on a campaign of joke policies.

Scientocracy

The problem with this ideology is that scientists often disagree on things, so which experts do you base policy off of?

And before you say 'the majority', that's just a democracy with extra steps.

"SCIENCE RULES!"

Scientocracy is an ideology that advocates for government and public policy based on scientific evidence and/or the opinions of scientists and experts. It is distinct from Technocracy, which is the rule of scientists and experts.

Secular Satanism

While this one can be pretty edgy, I still love it.

Also, it features goats a lot, so that's good.

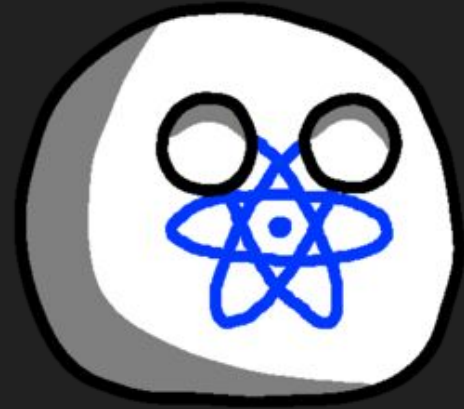

"How do you do, fellow devil worshippers?"

Secular Satanism is a loose term describing the ideologies of those who call themselves satanists while not believing in a literal Satan. They instead embrace a fictional Satan as a symbol of defiance against Abrahamic religions.

Secularism

This is the ideal religious policy, while i personally am 99% sure that there is no deity, people can believe what they want as long as it isn't being forced on people.

Also, as long as it's not harmful to the believer or those around them.

"Let the people believe what they want!"

Secularism believes in separating the church from the state and the state from the church.

Senatorialism

Oh shit, someone call the SCP foundation

PAW THE SENATE

Senatorialism is an ideology that through a freak accident managed to become part of the political compass. No one ever, not even itself, knows what it believes, but judging from its name, it probably has something to do with a senate. Who knows?

Separatism

I think this one really depends on the movement. Generally, ethnic or religious based spiritism is bad, with the exception of obvious and severe discrimination against that group.

Nations should have independence, at least until we get globalist enough for a one world state.

"Our nation, not yours!"

Separatism is a form of Nationalism that seeks to establish a nation, country, sovereign state, or government that is separate from an already existing nation and exists to serve as the nation, country, government or sovereign state of a specific group. It is an incredibly broad ideology that believes that minority groups in a society are at risk of losing identity. Groups such as linguistic, ethnic, cultural, religious, tribal, racial, ethnolinguistic, gender, and even political groups concentrated in an area that is controlled by an 'oppressive' nation, whose governance or majority populace is not belonging to the minority group of the area, should be separated, the land containing the minority should be able to have their own nation.

Sewer Socialism

There is basically nothing wrong with this ideology as long as it's democratic socialism.

The again, this is slightly outdated since most cities have at least a decent sanitation system.

"Always clean up after yourself! The government will take care of the rest!"

Sewer Socialism is an ideology that favours reform over revolution, advocates for the improvement of public health with sanitation systems, city-owned water and power systems, and better education.

Shia Theocracy

Theocracies are bad, it doesn't matter what sub-religion or variant it is.

"We are the Shia of Ali Ibn Abi Talib"

Shia Theocracy is an ideology similar to Islamic Theocracy but instead functions under the religious doctrine of Shia Islam rather than Sunni Islam.

Showa Statism

Fuck no, i don't care if this ideology is fucking perfect other than it's racism [It isn't]

Being the motive for (in my opinion), the most horrific war crime in human history makes this completely unredeemable.

Also, don't scroll the images on the wikipedia page, it's uncensored gore.

「私たちの敵は天皇の敵です」

("Our enemies are the Emperor's enemies.")

Showa Statism is an ideology which was practiced and developed in Japan during the first half of the reign of Emperor Showa. Showa Statism was a political syncretism of monarchist and nationalist ideologies in Japan, and was inspired by Italian Fascism.

Sikh Theocracy

While theocracies are bad and this is no exception, I understand why people want a separate state since the indian government isn't exactly kind to the Sikh minority.

"There is no Hindu or Muslim, only God." - Guru Nanak

Sikh Theocracy is an ideology that is supportive of the Khalistan movement which is a movement to create sovereign and separated state from India. Sikh Theocracy isn't for coercing Sikhism onto individuals but rather gathering the existing Sikhs to put under a country of one religion voluntarily. Sikhs believe in good and bad karma, and reincarnation over various creatures. Essentially, if you find the true purpose of life, your soul is carried away from Earth. If you do not, you are reincarnated back into a human. If you do bad deeds, you will be reincarnated into something that is not a human. Sikhism is a monotheistic religion, believing in a singular God (Waheguru), and Sikhs themselves pray/worship at gurdwaras.

Silver Legionism

This one's theme sounds like ass, it sounds like a crappy kids song.

Anyway, this one is obviously terrible.

"Loyalty, Liberation, Legion!"

Silver Legionism is an ideology representing the ideas of the Silver Legion of America and has uniquely 1930's American characteristics such as non-interventionism and opposition to President Roosevelt's New Deal; in addition, it has Christian Fascism, American Nationalism, Corporatism, Anti-Communism, White Nationalism and racial segregation integrated into its beliefs. Silver Legionism hoped to create a "Christian Commonwealth" without Jews or non-whites, which would be brought about by a "Silver Revolution" that would put the organization's leader, William Pelley, in power.

Situationism

I'm sorry but the whole thing of 'i'm too cool to be an actual ideology, i'm a movement' is so fucking pretentious.

"The mass media is the most glaring superficial manifestation of society"

Situationism does not exist. Situationists [members of the Situationist International] have always believed in the imperative need to not become an ideology. After the events of May '68 in France. Even though it is considered as a leftist movement, Situationists did not consider themselves as members of the ideological corpus of the Left. They advocated for a very libertarian philosophy, believing in an anti-authoritarian interpretation of Marxism, and inheriting from avant-garde art movements - such as Surrealism. They believed that modern society suffers from the presence of "The Spectacle", a structure that leads citizens to being spectators of their everyday life, leading to meaningless behaviors - such as looking permanently for profit or idolizing a dictator and obeying him.

Social Anarchism

While this isn't a terrible idea, it still is anarchism.

I will admit, cooperatives are good tho.

"The means of production being the collective work of humanity, the product should be the collective property of the race."

Social Anarchism is an ideology that believes in a stateless, classless society based on the principles of free-association, mutual aid and social equality. In Social Anarchism, the commune is the cornerstone of social organization, where all participants can vote in a direct democracy. It strongly advocates for a decentralized cooperative economic system centered around worker's self-management, in which trade unions and worker's cooperatives have democratic control over the economy. Much like Anarcho-Communism, Social Anarchism believes in the abolition of unjust hierarchies from state control to private capital, arguing that as long as structures of political and economic oppression continue to exist, individual freedom will never be realized in full.

Social Authoritarianism

This is a bad one and this what every republican things universal healthcare will result in.

Sure, a large welfare state does give the government a lot of power, but how is that more dangerous than a handful of CEOs having a lot of power.

"Enemies of the state don't get the welfare."

Social Authoritarianism is an ideology that advocates a strictly regulated economy with a strong welfare state and sometimes trade unions, but, unlike Social Democracy, has little to no democracy.

Social Capitalism

This isn't a terrible ideology, but i think in practice, the concept of capitalist free market and social democracy would inevitably clash.

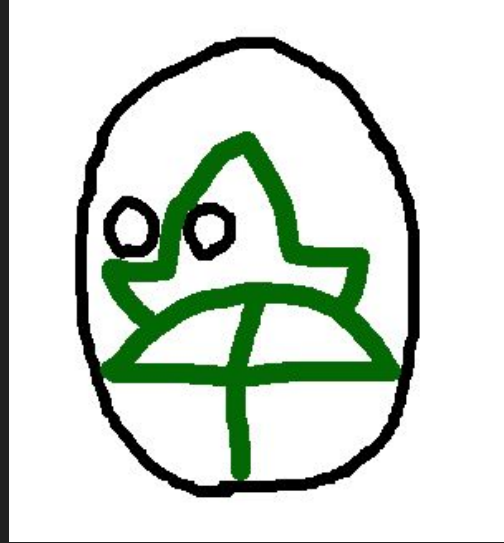

"Everyone will have welfare, a decent life, and happiness!"

Social Capitalism is an ideology that combines stances from both Social Democracy and Capitalism.

Social Credit

This one is rather vague but I think the general idea of this is okay.

I'm gonna assume 'decentralising economic power' means taking money away from the 1%, which is good.

"The credit belongs to all!"

Social Credit is an economical system that advocates for social control of credit, a national dividend, and other policies that aim to raise consumer's purchasing power and decentralize economic power.

Social Darwinism

Literal psychopath ideology, get help.

"The flesh of the weak is the food of the strong"

Social Darwinism is an ideology that advocates for a society where all murder, theft, and competition is legal with the intention that only the strongest individuals will survive. Social Darwinism has never been implemented in the real world and is largely based on fiction like the Purge films.

Social Democracy

While my more extreme side would say abolishing capitalism as an end-goal is preferable, realistically, we would need an era of Social Democracy to transition into socialism.

"Not me. Us"

Social Democracy is an ideology that advocates for strong welfare programs, unionization, with the addition of vast regulation to promote social justice. Despite often being called a "socialist" by right-wing ideologies, Social Democracy is often excluded from leftist circles as well due to their support for merely reforming capitalism as an end-goal rather than abolishing it. Social Democracy believes that a lot of welfare programs and business regulations, when achieved through reform rather than revolution, can lead to higher prosperity for the proletariat, rather than systems of unregulated capitalism or socialism.

Social Georgism

I haven't really done enough research to give a good opinion on land value tax so here's a paragraph I stole from here.

"The value of land is collectively, publicly created. But private landowners can appropriate this publicly-created value regardless of whether or not they put it to productive use. In other words, they don't have to contribute to the good party going on around them. Speculation inflates land prices near existing infrastructure, thereby pushing development to cheaper (but more remote and less productive) sites. This destroys farmland, and it requires the wasteful duplication of expensive infrastructure, increasing tax burdens."

"LVT and Welfare go BRRRRRR!"

Social Georgism is an ideology combining the Georgist idea of a land value tax with the desire for a sustainable and highly developed welfare state. Social Georgism is in essence a variant of Georgism which broadly covers most of the left wing of said movement, though primarily centre-left, closely linked to Social Democracy. Any Georgists considering themselves left wing could potentially add the "Social" prefix, even though some of the rather specific ones have their own more or less fleshed out definitions. Georgism itself could be considered quite "social", however, the movement has always had a divide between strongly libertarian types and more statist labour activists. Social Georgism would tend to attract the latter kind; generally, though not always, people favouring using the taxes collected through LVT to fund welfare provided by the state rather than a citizen's dividend.

Social Liberalism

FDR was fucking awesome, but this ideology is not leftist enough to truly address poverty.

Extra welfare in a 'free' market system is akin to putting a bandage on a bursting dam, it will only help for so long.

"The sense of justice is continuous with the love of mankind"

Social Liberalism is an ideology which combines elements of liberal democracy and economic interventionism in the name of ensuring economic justice as well as civil liberty. Social Liberals view the common good as harmonious with individual freedom. Much of Social Liberalism's policies focus on reform that address societal problems without overhauling the capitalist economic system. Social Liberals address economic and social issues such as poverty, welfare, infrastructure, health care, education, and the climate using government intervention while emphasizing that individual rights and autonomy are expectations under a social liberal government. Many governments throughout the modern world have successfully adopted social liberal policies, and is now the dominant form of liberalism in North America, where it's often referred to as simply 'liberalism'

Social Libertarianism

From the surface level research i did, Andrew Yang seems like a good guy, unlike most politicians.

However, the breaking point with me ever supporting him or his ideology is that fact he openly promotes cryptocurrency, which is an unstable commodity that also in very vulnerable to illegal activity.

Also, crypto mining is horrible for the environment.

"YANG GANG!"

Social Libertarianism is an ideology that advocates for a robust decentralized government and social welfare. Social Libertarianism believes that a welfare state and some forms of regulation are needed to guarantee positive liberties.

Socialism

Holy shit, how are socialists so good at music? (Totally not biased)

Anyway, this ideology is a good end goal but should be achieved via democratic and reformist means, a violent revolution would only cause more damage and put extremists in power.

"Stand up, all victims of oppression!"

Socialism is an ideology used to represent the broad range of ideologies that fall under the umbrella term of "Socialism" In the classical sense, socialism describes worker-owned means of production combined with communitarianism, heavily supporting worker co-ops, self-management, economic planning, and/or workplace democracy.

Socialism of the 21st Century

This one is awesome, going off the short description I can't find anything outwardly wrong about this one.

[NO QUOTE]

Socialism of the 21st Century is a ideology that is opposed to both capitalism and Marxism–Leninism, as it believes both failed to address issues such as poverty, hunger, racism, sexism, exploitation, the destruction of resources and the absence of a truly democratic system. It seeks to achieve its goals through parliamentary democracy, rather than violent revolution. It wants to establish an economy democratically controlled by the workers and based on the Marxian labor theory of value. It also wants strong democracy, with the utilization of referendums and protection of minority rights.

Socialist Transhumanism

While transhumanism should be approached very carefully, a slow and careful socialised effort to create cybernetics is much better than a fast and profit-driven capitalist effort.

"Robotic arms of the world unite!"

Socialist Transhumanism is an ideology that believes that the goals of achieving a socialist society and transcending humanity into the technological singularity are complementary goals.

Soulism

Don't do school, stay in drugs. wait-

"The laws of physics are oppressive and therefore must be abolished!"

Soulism is an ideology that believes that the individual should be able to fulfill desire through limiting suffering and reverse-engineering the universe, simplifying it to a state where suffering is minimized as much as possible, and all hierarchy is abolished. Furthermore, Soulists believe in the abolition of all property, private or personal because it is in everybody's best interest to share. Soulism believes that the individual is everything and the ego is the soul and the desires for laziness, leisure, drugs, and so on have to be fulfilled in order for a truly sane society to be achieved and this can only happen through anarchy. Soulists want to reject the physical body and its limits by leaving it and becoming an energetic soul or by going into cyberspace where an individual can do anything they want and live in peace.

State Atheism

While personal Atheism is great, I think a state enforcing it on the population is a breach of people's right to practice their own faith.

It's also not really gonna end well to demand people conform to your own beliefs, it makes you no better than the fundamentalists you decry.

"No gods, only masters."

State Atheism is an ideology that advocates for a godless society for all of its citizens. State atheists tend to believe that religion in society should be immensely discouraged and will suppress all religions by any means necessary. While atheism on its own simply means no belief in any religious deities, state atheism takes on a more overtly anti-theist approach.

State Capitalism

This one isn't great. A profit driven company being ran by the government is no different to a private company being driven by profit.

"I don't know what I am at this point"

State Capitalism is an economic system where the state plays an active role in business or commercial activity. This can be direct in the form of state-owned enterprises or companies where the state has controlling shares or in an indirect form of state planning through government agencies organized along for-profit and business management lines or through state-sponsored private business activities. If the state owns or controls all the means of production or is the primary shareholder.

State Liberalism

What in the name of conspiracy theories is this?

Woke SJW nazi is a phrase thought up by only the most insane.

Also, that song is AI slop.

While i do somewhat agree with the phrase 'You will own nothing and be happy' i only agree in the context of companies putting overbearing DRM on software, like how adobe requires you to be connected to the internet 24/7 if you have their product installed.

"You will own nothing and you will be happy."

State Liberalism is an ideology. It believes the best way to progress is via a totalitarian world empire that follows various schools of capitalist economics, usually the Chicago School. In other words, they are an even more extreme version of neoliberalism, with even further emphasis on promoting progressive ideas. State liberalism is a hypothetical ideology told to be the successor to Neoliberalism within the coming years. The common theory assumes that the only way by which the current culturally left-wing and Capitalist order found in most western countries can only sustain itself by a rapid increase of state power, this view of future often manifests itself in memes in which dictatorial or dictatorial-like powers are used to uphold progressive interests, particularly interests related to LGBT people.

State Oriental Orthodoxy

This is just a theocracy without the word in its name,
cringe.

"Why have divine right when you can be the literal descendants of King Solomon!"

State Oriental Orthodoxy is an ideology that believes that Oriental Orthodoxy should be the state religion and the religion and state should help each other on issues but not interfere with each other.

State Shinto

This is just a variant of a theocracy like the last ideology, bad.

[NO QUOTE]

State Shinto is an ideology that believes that some of Shinto's teachings should be endorsed by the state like that the emperor should be worshiped as a divine being.

State Socialism

While economic interventionism is a good, complete planning of the economy is far too restrictive.

It prevents people from doing jobs that they want and instead do the jobs assigned to them.

"Socialism IS when the government does stuff!"

State Socialism is an ideology that believes in the presence of centralized authority, state ownership of the means of production by a worker's party and that a state-planned economy is a necessity in transitioning from Capitalism to Socialism.

Steiner-Vallentyne School

While this one isn't terrible, it is rather vague with the 'degree' of wealth redistribution, be more clear next time please.

[NO QUOTE]

The Steiner-Vallentyne School is an ideological school of thought that opposes the ownership of natural resources and land if such ownership acts as a detriment to others, and believes in state welfare programs with some degree of wealth redistribution.

Stransserism

What the actual fuck?

"There can only be trans rights under the hooked cross uwu"

Stransserism is an ideology that advocates for a combination of Strasserism with LGBT, and in particular, Trans rights. Like Strasserism, it wishes to establish a nationalist workers' state. The ideology is either ethnonationalist or more commonly, White Nationalist in nature due in part to white countries being seen as more progressive on LGBT issues than non-white ones. People on the internet have adopted the ideology, knowledge of its existence spreading primarily through memes but still attracting several serious adherents.

Strasserism

“No bro you don’t get it, I just hate the jews because they are economically inferior, i’m not racist i swear!!” - A statement thought up by the UTTERLY DERANGED

„Wir müssen von der Rechten Nationalismus ohne Kapitalismus und von der Linken Sozialismus ohne Internationalismus übernehmen“

Strasserism is a ideology that supports a socialist economy with strong worker's rights and believes that markets are dominated by those it deems "inferior". It holds antisemitic and generally racist views, and enforces these with an authoritarian government, much like Nazism. Strasserism often views bourgeois Jews as less than themselves for more economic reasons than on a racial hierarchy.

Stratocracy

While martial law is needed in very extreme and niche scenarios, it should always be temporary and for as short of a time as needed.

A nation ruled full-time by the military sounds like a hellish dystopia.

Bork! Bork! Bork! Bork!

(The military shall rule!)

Stratocracy is an ideology based on the idea that the military is the only government that can ensure stability within a given country or nation. Many stratocratic governments have been heavily influenced by other authoritarian ideologies such as Authoritarian Capitalism, Marxism–Leninism and even less authoritarian ideologies such as Neoliberalism, and Neoconservatism. Stratocracies do not have to have a de jure military official at its head to be a stratocracy, but rather a de facto military leader that has strong influence over leadership over a nation's government.

Syndicalism

This is a pretty good idea, loads of small decentralised unions (syndicates) are much less likely to become corrupt or inefficient due to size.

"Which side are you on?"

Syndicalism is an ideology rooted in Socialism that advocates for worker empowerment through unionization and decentralized revolutionary organizations called syndicates. These syndicates are seen as the key institutions for advancing workers' demands, primarily through direct action like strikes and protests. Syndicalists believe that this grassroots approach is the most effective way to challenge Capitalism and achieve a socialist society. In a post-capitalist system, Syndicalism envisions a decentralized governance structure where a congress or federation of syndicates represents various unions and economic sectors. This ensures that power remains in the hands of the workers, allowing for democratic decision-making at the local level while avoiding top-down control and state bureaucracy. The core aim is a society where both economic and political decisions are driven by worker-led organizations, ensuring a balance between worker control and decentralized governance.

Synthesis Anarchism

I'm sorry but i highly doubt a commune containing both anarcho-primitivism and anarcho-transhumanism would be very stable.

"Anarchies of the world, unite!"

Synthesis Anarchism is an ideology which believes in joining all anti-capitalist anarchist ideologies under one movement.

Taoist Anarchism

Anarchism bad, bonus points for being based on a religion.

"The ruler is like a mirror, reflecting light, doing nothing, and yet, beauty and ugliness present themselves."

Taoist Anarchism is an ideology that believes Taoism is an Anarchist religion and philosophy and that Taoism should be the main religion to model an anarchist society after.

Techno-Anarchism

One of the only good anarchist ideologies. The internet is such a powerful tool that it shouldn't be subject to the will of nations or corporations.

Also, open source software is just inherently safer.

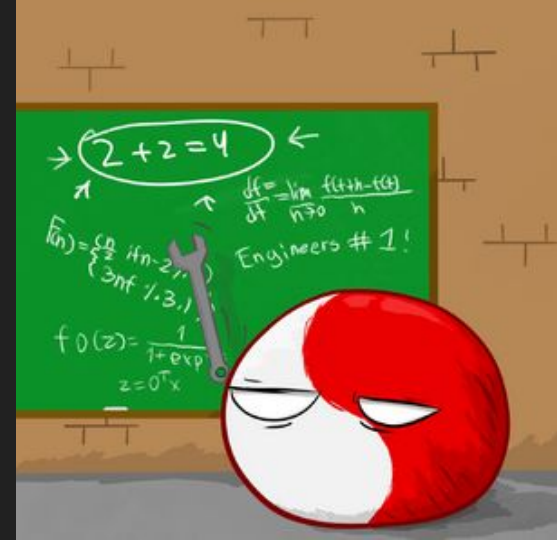

"Hehehe the state can't defeat me if I'm behind a computer screen!"

Techno-Anarchism is an ideology deeply rooted in the principles of technological progression and liberty. Emerging from the philosophies of the Free and Open Source Software (FOSS) movements, it envisions a world where digital spaces are entirely free from centralized authority, fostering a decentralized and egalitarian online environment. Advocates of Techno-Anarchism champion the use of cryptographic tools and privacy-enhancing technologies as vital mechanisms for ensuring individuals maintain security, anonymity, and autonomy over their digital existence. By promoting the development and widespread adoption of these technologies, the ideology seeks to empower individuals to fully control their slice of cyberspace, resisting government surveillance, state censorship, and corporate domination.

Technocracy

While in an ideal world, this would be great. I don't think people could even agree on who the 'expert' in a certain field would be.

Also, relying purely on 'experts' would make the government seem like a cold, unfeeling machine that would happily sacrifice something if it was pragmatically preferred.

"Open your textbooks to page 8"

Technocracy is an ideology that supports a system where scientific and engineering methods are applied to governance in order to manage society as an engineering project through the use of technical experts. It seeks to replace methods of scarcity such as money, value, and debt with an empirical accounting of all physical resources, products, and services, using automation to decrease the amount of human labor required in the process. The ultimate goal of technocracy is provide the highest standard of living for everyone in terms of income, housing, healthcare, education, and leisure as sustainably possible.

Technogaianism

I believe new technologies will play a pivotal role against climate change and general environmental problems.

If global research was focused almost entirely on solar panels for just a few months, I'm pretty sure we could improve them to the point of surpassing the efficiency of fossil fuels.

Also, solarpunk is a beautiful aesthetic.

"We will use our robot arms to serve Mother Nature."

Technogaianism is a ideology that believes that the preservation of Earth's Natural Habitat would only get easier with the creation of better technology and thus the pursuit of Humanity reaching space colonization and environmentalism is complementary as dirty industries can be moved off-Earth.

Technoliberalism

That theme song is so fucking lame but it's somehow also based af.

Anyway, this one isn't great since liberalism also implies the whole 'free market' thing.

However, technological progress is pretty good.

"Why can't technocrats and liberals get together?"

Technoliberalism is an ideology that believes in the ideals of liberty, self-awareness, individuality, decentralization, and responsibility while developing technologies that are available to the general public and the five core interests of technoliberalism such as the construction of government, environmentalism, economics, education and science, and civil liberties.

Tetrarchy

Well i guess power being spread between four dictators is better than it being focused on one dictator, still isn't great though.

[NO QUOTE]

Tetrarchy is a political system in which four, powerful, wealthy authorities are the rulers, usually with direct, absolute power.

Theodemocracy

That theme song genuinely sounds cultish.

Anyway, even in an democracy, having religion integrated with any government is a bad thing since it's basing a government off of something that cannot be proven.

"Choose the Right."

Theodemocracy is an ideology invented by Joseph Smith, the founder of the Mormon Church. It combines Mormon values with Christian Democracy where religious leaders and their decisions are sustained by votes from their congregation. The end goal of Theodemocracy was to lay the groundwork for the Kingdom of God before the second coming of Christ. After the death of Smith, Theodemocracy was brought to Utah by Brigham Young, where it played a small role in the government of the state of Deseret until Utah became a territory in 1850.

Third Way

What the hell is that theme song?

Anyway, this one is okay but the union busting is a deal breaker for me.

"Beyond laissez-faire and socialism, there is a third way"

Third Way is an ideology that combines stances from Neoliberalism and Social Democracy. The policies favored by Third Way fluctuate based on political/economic circumstances and leadership attitudes. Third Way advocates mostly pursue and advocate for private-public partnerships, commercialization, a moderate welfare state, balanced budgets, free trade, closer transatlantic relations, deregulation, and union busting while still maintaining a left-wing aesthetic.

Timocracy

ew, Landlord Alert™

"I own your land, cope Georgoids."

Timocracy is a government form of the rule of individuals that possess property.

Titoism

Although Tito was a dictator,
I do respect how many times
he told Stalin to piss off.

Anyway, the concept of Yugoslavia is okay, anything that can overwrite people's ethnic tribalism is good.

"Jebe ti prvi red na sahrani; Uz Maršala Tita; Smrt fašizmu; Sloboda narodu!"

("Fuck the first row of the funeral; With Marshall Tito; Death to Fascism; Freedom to the People!")

Titoism is an ideology that believes in uniting ethnic and religious identities of the Balkans under a unified Yugoslavian national identity.

Total Liberationism

Anarchism is bad, although veganism is a noble goal. I think society will eventually become meat-free, likely due to some kind of indistinguishable substitute.

"We need total liberation!"

Total Liberationism is a movement and political philosophy that believes the hierarchy of humans over animals is unjust, so we should not abuse or exploit animals for food, clothing, entertainment, or any other purpose. Total Liberationism also opposes all forms of human oppression as well as the oppression of other animals and ecosystems.

Totalitarianism

Terrible ideology. This kind of government shouldn't be established even during a crisis.

"You listen to me."

Totalitarianism is an ideology that believes that the state should permeate all facets of society, that society must be run for the state by the state and that all opposition should be banned. It is opposed to civil liberties and believes dissent should be harshly punished.

Traditionalism

While a small amount of tradition is tolerable in society, cultural progress should be prioritised over the cares and whims of so-called ancestors.

That theme song has an awesome drum beat though.

"Back in my day..."

Traditionalism is a way of looking at social reality that emphasizes duty, virtue, and human nature. It seeks to maintain the social order and their country's traditional values. They usually seek to preserve a range of institutions like religion with the aim of emphasizing social stability and continuity.

Transhumanism

While i admit robot arms are cool as hell, we should approach the development of cybernetics with extreme caution since you don't wanna skirt safety regulations when putting stuff in people's bodies.

“acquire object 'robot arm'”

Transhumanism is an ideology that supports the usage of emerging technologies to enhance humanity and overcome its own physical limitations. Due to the nature of transhumanism, it can applied alongside almost any other civic, economic or ideological system, with the few exceptions being ideologies that reject technological development or oppose transhumanism as a whole.

Tribalism

Life in a tribe would fucking suck. I don't wanna get eaten by mega bear, catch unknown illness, starve through winter, etc.

Please don't return to monkey.

[NO QUOTE]

Tribalism or Hunterism-Gatherism is a very early ideology that hardly has any support at all and is perceived as primitive or uncivilized in the modern public eye. Though colonialism and globalization has made tribal life for many completely obsolete, it is still practiced in some parts of the world such as North Sentinel Island, or some parts of the Amazon rainforest.

Tridemism

Sorry for the lack of information in the description, but this is basically chinese neo-conservatism.

Neo-Conservatism isn't great but i do understand how aggressive Taiwan has to be in order to survive against the PRC.

“三民主義統一中國！”

“(A Unified China Under Tridemism!)”

Tridemism is an ideology which was developed by Sun Yat-sen, meant to bring power and prosperity to China. It is based on three principles, those being Minzu, Minquan and Minsheng, also being the constitutional ideology of the Republic of China (now Taiwan).

Trotskyism

That theme song sounds fucking awesome.

Despite this, this ideology sucks since spreading revolutions to other nations is no different than invading them.

Basically, provide aid to already existing socialist movements, but don't make them out of thin air.

"Not every exasperated petty bourgeois could have become Hitler, but a particle of Hitler is lodged in every exasperated petty bourgeois."

Trotskyism or Bolshevik-Leninism is an ideology focusing on the political ideals of Leon Trotsky. Trotskyism's main belief is the "Permanent Revolution", which is the belief that the complete victory of the bourgeois-democratic revolution in Russia is conceivable only in the form of the dictatorship of the proletariat, leaning on the peasantry, due to the international nature of capitalism allowing for "backwards" nations such as Russia to skip stages through combined development. The democratic revolution grows over directly into the socialist revolution and thereby becomes a permanent revolution.

Turkish Idealism

Another variant of fascism,
cringe.

Also, having a quote of someone associated with Kleptocracy on your ideology page isn't a good look, just saying.

"40 YAPAR"

Turkish Idealism is the ideology of the Turkish group Grey Wolves. Turkish Idealism believes in Irredentism and Imperialism, as it believes in restoring the glory of the Ottoman Empire. It is, like other fascists and ultranationalists, very xenophobic towards non-Turks, such as Greeks, especially the Greeks.

Ultrnationalism

YOU FOOL, I AM NO
ORDINARY RACIST. I AM BECOMING ULTRA-RACIST!

"STANISTAN ABOVE ALL!"

Ultrnationalism is an ideology that emphasizes the exceptionalism and superiority of one's own nation and believes in always putting the national interests above all others at any cost.

Unconditional Accelerationism

Damm, this one just seems sad. Imagine rejecting anything 'positive'.

"Do I have a praxis? No, but do I hate it? Probably."

Unconditional Accelerationism is an ideology that rejects any "positive" form of political activity or organization although neutral to specific ideologies.

Universal Monarchism

I'm sure a single ruler over the entire planet is sustainable, probably.

"I speak Spanish to God, Italian to women, French to men and German to my horse."

Universal Monarchy is a theoretical system of governance in which a single monarch rules over the planet, whether absolute or constitutional.

Utopian Socialism

Holy shit, I wish it was this easy. Also, great song choice.

Overall, a very naive ideology yet I still love it.

"Despots prefer the friendship of the dog, who, unjustly mistreated and debased, still loves and serves the man who wronged him."

Utopian Socialism is an umbrella term for any type of socialism which rejects Marx's concept of 'scientific socialism' and material dialectic. Utopian Socialism isn't necessarily 'utopian' in the common sense and may involve a varying degree of pessimism about the nature of humanity. An instance of Utopian Socialism was that practiced by Robert Owen, who believed in creating Socialism by renting a plentiful area of land to establish said "socialist utopia" where everyone can redistribute the means of production in peace through class collaboration, including the bourgeoisie who would willingly give up their wealth to live in the utopia.

Volkism

Ew, another nazi ideology.
Also, it's funny af that this ideology's theme song has been removed from YouTube, I wonder why!

“Das deutsche Volk über alles!”

Volkism is an ideology that is based around the Völkisch movement. It had ideas about German ethnonationalism, such as anti-Semitism, that would be implemented by Hitler and the Nazi Party under Nazism.

NOTE

Voluntary Human Extinction was gonna be next, but its wiki page is removed so
acknowledging it.

Voluntary Human Extinction

Vperedism

This is one of those ideologies that could only exist in the past, there's not really a 'peasantry' to reject anymore.

Also i'm sorry but that theme song sounds like disney villain music.

"Tektology is a universal natural science. It is just being conceived ; but since the entire organizational experience of mankind belongs to it, its development should be swift and revolutionary, as it is revolutionary in its nature."

Vperedism is an ideology that believes in the prioritisation of the proletariat as the most revolutionary class of society, rejecting a worker-peasant alliance. Vperedism is highly critical of Marxist theory of dialectics and favours a more positivist view, leading to theories such as tektology. Vperedism is therefore in favour of a technocratic economy and is heavily supportive of economic planning, as well as the capacity of technology beyond simple production.

Welfare Chauvinism

This is like an evil inverted version of social democracy, cringe.

"Welfare for Stanistanis only!"

Welfare Chauvinism is an ideology that believes a welfare state should be combined with extreme nationalism. It usually advocates for welfare to be provided only to those who fit cultural, ethnic, or religious qualifications for what they think is a part of national identity, applying elements of Ethnocracy.

Welfarism

This one is great, without welfare, i'm fully convinced that society would be much worse.

Also, a government's job is to look after its citizens, is it not?

"Don't worry, I'm here to help!"

Welfarism in the political scene most commonly refers to the economic standpoint of welfare, which concerns subjects including reductions of cost in services, supplemental income and assistance programs provided by a government or collective body system.

White Nationalism

I think 99% of people know this one sucks, so i don't have much to say apart from the pointing out the blatant dog whistle in the quote.

"(((YOU))) WILL NOT REPLACE US!"

White Nationalism is a political ideology that emphasizes that the white race is the greatest and that other races are genetically and culturally inferior. Due to this, white nationalists commonly advocate for ethno states where non-whites have little to no rights, or sometimes, the enslavement of non-white races in order to create a white society.

World Federalism

Awesome long-term goal and i would be willing to bet that it will be achieved within this millennium, unless we end up nuking each other,
then wait another millennium.

"Why can't we be friends? Why can't we be friends?"

World Federalism is an ideology and movement aiming to create a global federal government. A world federation would have authority on issues of global reach. While the power over local matters would reside in the members of such federation, the overall sovereignty over the world population would largely reside in the federal government. Ultimately, the goal of world federalism is to combat and eventually triumph over the various demons that have hung over humanity's shoulders for so long. Namely, bringing about an end to poverty, war, climate change, and harmful tribalist mentalities. While these aspirations may seem grandiose or utopian, world federalists assert that such thinking is counterproductive and is exactly why we have these problems in the first place.

Xenofeminism

I don't say this outwardly since it's not exactly mainstream, but i genuinely think gender is just as fluid as someone's name.

Yes, sex cannot be changed but gender is a part of someone's identity and they should be able to mold it however they please.

"If nature is unjust, change nature!"

Xenofeminism is an ideology in favour of using technology as a way to destroy unjust hierarchies. It claims that a feminist must be both gender and race abolitionist where the concept of man and woman disappears to make room for any sexual and personal plurality that every human chooses to have according to their personality and particular needs.

Yellow Socialism

This one seems okay at face value but if you give unions and business equal power, they're just gonna feud with no deal ever being made.

Or worse, the authoritarian government is biased towards one of the sides in that feud.

[NO QUOTE]

Yellow Socialism is an ideology created as a reaction to "red socialism" which was growing prominent in Europe during the late 19th century. This form of socialism is characterized by unions working with groups of businesses, with workers having a greater profit through negotiations between unions and business groups, all of which would operate under a strong authoritarian government.

Zero Accelerationism

Honestly, these kind of defeatist attitudes are a massive problem with society.

Even if society is somehow doomed to collapse, do you wanna spend your whole life just wallowing to yourself about it, or will you try everything you can to save it? History always remembers those who act.

yawn

Zero Accelerationism is the theory that technocapital is doomed to be overtaken by its own waste product, thus leading to the collapse of civilization.

Zionism

Thanks to AI for that summary, the original one used an anti-semitic phrase.

Anyway, this one sucks, I've made it clear that founding a nation based on a religion is bad. This is however even worse since the people founding the nation weren't even originally native to the land they occupy.

Obviously I understand the plight of Jews, they've been abused and discriminated against throughout history due to being a small minority in countries.

However, that doesn't justify occupying someone else's land to create a 'safe haven' therefore oppressing someone else.

"Am Yisrael Chai!"

Zionism is an ideology that emerged in the late 19th century with the goal of establishing a Jewish homeland in the historic region of Palestine. It arose in response to antisemitism in Europe and the desire for Jewish self-determination which led to waves of Jewish immigration to Palestine and ultimately to the founding of the State of Israel in 1948. While many Jews support Zionism as a means of securing Jewish identity and safety, it remains controversial, especially among Palestinians and others who view it as contributing to displacement and conflict in the region.

Zoroastrian Theocracy

Theocracies are bad, this is no exception.

"Humata, Huxta, Huvarshta."

Zoroastrian Theocracy is an ideology that wishes to establish a religious government with Zoroastrianism as the state religion. Zoroastrianism is notable for being the first documented monotheistic religion and greatly influencing all major Abrahamic religions through concepts such as Free Will, Dichotomy of Good and Evil, and Heaven and Hell. Zoroastrian Theocracy was most relevant in Iran through the Persian Empires that held Zoroastrianism as a state religion, but since the Islamic Conquest of Iran, Zoroastrianism went into decline and very few Zoroastrian states existed since then, with no relevant Theocratic Zoroastrian movement existing today.

İttihadism

This ideology is responsible for a genocide, that's all i need to hear, get our my office.

"ALLAH VATAN NAMUS İTTHAD!"

("ALLAH NATION HONOUR ITTHAD!")

İttihadism was a prominent ideology in the Ottoman Empire that came about after the Young Turk Revolution of 1908. Whilst the Revolution resulted in Education reform, the Secularization of Ottoman society and the expansion of women's rights, it also led to the rise of Turkish Nationalism, that culminated in the Armenian Genocide of 1915-1917. It was the official ideology of the Committee of Union and Progress.

THE END

Thank you for wasting your life reading this, i hope you at least found a new song you like from the links.

Also, the last ideology is last because it had a weird character which is on the bottom of the alphabetic sort list.

Don't be racist, goodbye.
